OUTLINES.

On the eve of election on Tuesday next, the Democrats are claiming that they will control the next National House of Representatives by 22 majority; the Republicans assert that they will have 58 majority——North Carolina is expected to give 40,000 to 50,000 Democratic majority and elect Democratic Congressmen from every district——William Randolph Hearst claiming New York by 250,000 and Hughes believes he will be elected by from 100,000 to 150,000; the campaign has been a personal duel between the two candidates and advices from New York say that party lines are so broken the most expert prognosticator cannot forecast the Empire State ——Commodore Peary encountered unusual difficulties in his Arctic expedition; he lost part of his supplies, ran short of coal and the steamer Roosevelt was damaged by ice and storms——President Roosevelt will leave Pine Knot, Va., this morning for Washington and will go to Oyster Bay on Monday to vote——Samuel Mandle, a cotton buyer from Sparta, Ga., has been arrested in New York for forgery in a cotton transaction to the amount of $9,600—The Ute Indians in Wyoming have agreed to return to Fort Meade with the soldiers and two chiefs will go to Washington to talk over their troubles with President Roosevelt——New York markets: Money on call nominal; no loans, time loans dull and firm; spot cotton 10 points lower, closing quiet at 10.30; flour quiet, but slow; wheat steady, No. 2 red 82 1-4 elevator; corn steady, No. 2 56 elevator; oats steady, mixed 38 1-2; turpentine firm 69 1-2 to 70; rosin firm, strained common to good 4.20 to 4.25.

Next Tuesday we will vote to save North Carolina. There are plenty of other States to save the Nation.

If Hearst doesn't beat the Republicans in New York next Tuesday, they must admit that he has given them the scare of their lives.

A magazine writer asks "When a man marries should he give up his club?" Such questions as that just give some married men the opportunity to say that it depends on whether he has any other means of self-defense.

"Carolina! Carolina! May Heaven's blessings defend her" From the Radical gang that would rend her; Pray, put the marplots out of commission at Tuesday's election. And make sure of their utter rejection.
won't "run amuck."

The Ute Indians have probably taken to the woods to get something to eat. Everybody works but the Indian, for he would rather hunt than roll up his sleeves and do onery labor to get his share of "Republican prosperity." Prosperity comes to him who works.

Not that the people of New York love Hearst more but that the supporters of Hughes include alll the gentlemen of "predatory" predilictions. Not that the people of New York love Hughes less but that they can't stand for the crowd supporting him with the confident belief that he

President Roosevelt declared all along that he would "take no hand in New York politics. However, he failed to promise not to send up one of his cabinet knockers armed with something that made a noise like a man who was hitting something with a "big stick."

A man at Middleton, Conn., has a mania for swallowing iron and steel. Recently physicians removed an iron bolt from his anatomy, but they believe that they are now up against it in trying to recover a nicket-plated chain which the man swallowed a few days ago. A man going around swallowing things like that is in as bad condition as the man who could swallow the Republican campaign arguments that we get our prosperity from the Republican party.

The King of Belgium, it is "norated," has Thos. F. Ryan, formerly of Virginia, now of New York, as his partner in the rubber business in the Congo. A Belgian paper says "there are millions of money in the rubber business in Africa." The men who engage in the "rubber" business in Wilmington also agree that they get their money's worth.

VERDICT NOT GUILTY

Capt Lauchlin McLean Master of British Steamer Acquitted in Federal Court.

THE TRIAL ENDED YESTERDAY

Argument by Counsel to the Jury All the Morning—Recess Taken Until Thursday Morning of This Week—Osceola Sails.

Captain Lauchlin McLean, master of the British steamer Osceola, charged with unlawfully detaining United States marines aboard his ship on her late voyage from Newport News to Wilmington, the particulars of which are familiar to the public, was found not guilty and discharged in the United States District Court in this city yesterday. The verdict was returned by the jury at half past three o'clock in the afternoon, court having taken a recess upon the conclusion of the case shortly after 2 o'clock. It is understood that less than the interim of the recess was required for the jury to make up its verdict and that there was not the slightest possibility of a conviction, though all agree that the prosecution presented its case in the strongest possible light.

Capt. McLean, British Vice Consul James Sprunt, the attorneys and a large number of shipping masters much interested in the outcome of the case, were present in the court room when the verdict was rendered and crowded about Capt. McLean so far as the court limittations would allow, and shook his hand warmly. In a few minutes Capt. McLean bowed his thanks to the jury, which was still seated in the box, and took his leave of the room. After some discussion of the disposition to make of the seamen who had been held as witnesses, the court took a recess until next Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock Judge Purnell and most of the court officers have gone to their homes, but will return in time for the opening of court this week.

All of yesterday morning's session of the court was taken up with argument to the jury by counsel for both siles. Two hours was allowed each side to present the case, although the District Attorney stated that he would probably not want more than an hour. George Rountree, Esq., opened for the defence in a speech of 35 minutes, directing his argument mainly to the law as it applied to the facts in the case.

J. O. Carr, Esq., made an impassioned plea to the jury in behalf of his client absolving him from any wilful intent to violate the law or show contempt for the United States Navy. He laid especial stress upon the high character of Capt. McLean, which was without a doubt a large factor in his prompt acquittal. Mr. Carr occupied just 35 minutes of the time allotted to him.

Marsden Bellamy, Esq., closed for the defence in a general resume of the entire case, presenting his side of the case vigorously and exceedingly well. He scathingly denounced the men Byrnes and Flynn and closed with an appeal of special force that justice be done.

The speech of Col. Skinner, the district attorney, closing the case is spoken of by all who heard it as a remarkably fine effort, bristling with facts of law and clothed in the most eloquent language. The prosecution frankly confessed that if there was anything in the case and there was a possibility of conviction, it had certainly been put to the jury in the fine arguments of Col. Skinner.

Judge Purnell's charge was regarded as eminently fair and was clear in the extreme. It was nearly 2:30 o'clock when the jury retired with the case. Judge Purnell announcing that he would reconvene court at 3:30 and if the verdict was ready, he would receive the same.

Court met promptly on time in the afternoon and there was no delay by the jury in making return of its finding in the case of Capt. McLean, who received the verdict with seeming confidence and with the best of grace.

Immediately the verdict was rendered, Mr. Rountree raised the point as to the disposition of members of the crew, four of the number being enlisted aboard the ship without question. These will be returned to the ship. Byrnes and Flynn, who were alleged to have been shanghaied, will return to the United States receiving ship Franklin at the Norfolk Navy Yard and be transferred thence to the United States cruiser Columbia. Judge Purnell declined to make any order in the case as the court is purely statutory. Col. Skinner, the District Attorney, read a letter from the commander of the United States cruiser Columbia detailing the circumstances of the departure of the men from the ship and stating that one of them had over $500 to his credit on the ship and the other something over $100. The commander stated that if the men would return, he would use his best effort to have the charge of desertion against them quashed under the circumstances. The Judge remarked that the witnesses' fees received by the men would probably enable them to get to the receiving ship at Norfolk.

Capt. McLean, whose ship has been detained here several days with a cargo of cotton for Liverpool, expects to sail this morning. He is a gentleman of the highest type and belongs to the Established Church of Scotland, a son being a minister of that church, and a daughter being an instructor in higher mathematics in the Highlands of Scotland. His demeanor during the severe trail to which he has been subjected in the detention of his ship, etc, have made him many warm friends in Wilmington who would be pleased to know of his coming to Wilmington again. Maj. Haughton, British Vice Counsul at Newport News, the leading witness at the trial was a guest of Mr. James Sprunt at his home while in Wilmington, and he too made many friends while here. He is well known in Virginia, New York and in other cities along the coast. For seven years he has been a senior warden of St. Luke's church, in Newport News..

VIGOROUS CAMPAIGN

United States Mail Swamped With Literature Exhorting Democrats to Vote Next Tuesday—Extra Carriers Authorized.

"Washington, Nov. 3.—First Assistant Postmaster General Hitchcock today issued telepgraphic authority for employment at Wilmington, N. C., of such clerks and others as may be needed to meet the emergency arising from handling vast quantities of election mail."

The efforts of Chairman Bellamy and the Democratic County Executive Committee to get the vote out on Tuesday, which effort besides personal work, largely consists of mailing literature to the voters seems to have become Nationally important. The fact is, such large quantities of printed matter has been put in the postoffice the past two days that the carriers in the various parts of the city have been swamped. Although opposite in politics, Postmaster Wallace evidently wanted to give the committee a "square deal" and make prompt delivery so as none of the exhortations to vote on election day would be delivered too late, therefore on yesterday he telegraphed to the department for authority to employ extra carrier service until all the mail was delivered. The authority was given and Mr. Wallace did Mr. Bellamy the courtesy to allow him to name the men which he did. The matter was regarded as of sufficient importance in Washington for the Associated Press to handle the incident as a news item, which it did in the fololwing dispatch sent out to all the leading newspapers of the country and printed in them this morning:

THE WESTERN UNION

New and Latest Improved Equipment Just Installed in Wilmington Office.

STORAGE BATTERY SYSTEM

Plant Just Put in at Cost of Something Like $5,000—Improvements Place The Service on Footing With Larger Cities.

New and latest improved equipment has just been installed in the Western Union telegraph office in this city at a cost of something over $5,000. The new equipment was completed and formally turned over to Manager W. G. Sale yesterday by Mr. S. R. Crowder, of the Construction Engineer's Department of the company, who has been in the city nearly all the week. The interior of the office now presents a metropolitan appearance and it is safe to say that it is now in a much better position to handle the business than ever before.

All the old primary batteries and apparatus in the office have been discarded and substituted for it is a modern storage battery plant and equipment such as in use in all the larger cities in the country. The outside wires enter the office from under the building in the rear through cables from the terminal poles to the switchboard. At the point of entrance to the building all the wires are protected with the latest design of lightning arrestors and enclosed fuses. From this terminal arrangement the wires are conducted to the main switchboard, which is of the latest pattern and accommodates fifty main line wires. These are so admirably arranged that they can be manipulated almost by a layman. The power necessry to operate the trunk lines and local circuits is derived from storage batteries exclusively instead of from the old fashioned gravity batteries which were a source of continued annoyance and requiring constant attention. The storage battery consists of 758 secondary units. The charging current is supplied primarily by the Consolidated Railways, Light and Power Company and operates a five horse power induction motor which is coupled to a dynamo which supplies the direct current necessary to charge the secondary battery.

It is estimated that the plant will give first-class service to from seven to eight years without requiring renewals of any kind. In view of this fact and the rapid growth of Wilmington the plant was designed large enough to take care of five times the present business of the company which is considered a fair estimate of the probable growth of the requirements of the office during that period. There is table space now to accommodate thirty operators with floor space in the present quarters in the Elks' Temple to accommodate as many more.

The machinery of the office consists of quadruplexes, duplexes, automatic repeaters, apparatus for time service, messenger call system, etc., all of the latest type. Wilmington is now connected by mutiplex apparatus with the New York main office, Cotton and Stock Exchanges, Western Union Cable office in New York and with Washington, Richmond and all other important cities, which means direct communication with these offices. Single direct wires go to Augusta, Charleston, Charlotte, Columbia and all local points in this territory.

The plant just installed by the Western Union here is the same as others recently installed in Mobile, Montgomery, Knoxville, Birmingham, Macon, Ga., and other prominent Southern cities where the business demands have been for the very best. Outside of the new apparatus, Manager Sale has inaugurated many other notable improvements at the office, all looking to increasing the efficiency of the service. The A. D. T. messenger boys at the office recently appeared in handsome new uniforms and altogether the Western Union office in Wilmington just now is a pretty bright reflection of the general prosperity of the city and surrounding country.

HIS BROTHER DEAD

Governor Glenn Hastily Summoned Back to Macon, Ga., Yesterday Afternoon

THE NEWS FROM RALEIGH

Big Railroad Merger on Foot in Eastern North Carolina—An Incident of the Colored State Fair—Supreme Court to Adjourn.

(Special Star Telegram.)

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 3.—All offices in the State capitol were closed at noon to-day on account of the death of E. T. B. Glenn, a brother of Governor R. B. Glenn, at Macon, Ga. Gov. Glenn had been with his brother several days, but left last evening for Raleigh, arriving just a few minutes ahead of the telegram announcing his brother's death.

The news came as a great surprise to the Governor, as he had been assured after consultation with physicians yesterday, that his brother might live for weeks or a month or more, so he determined to return to pressing official duties here and go back to his brother in Macon to be with him in his last hours. The deceased was 46 years old and leaves four children, a son and two daughters. He was an accountant of the Georgia railroad. The Governor left for Macon this afternoon to attend the funeral.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 3.—Official announcement is made that there will be a meeting of the stockholders of the Raleigh & Pamlico Sound Railroad Company in this city November 22nd, to approve or reject a proposition for the merger of the company's property and interests with the Norfolk & Southern Railroad Company. in connection with a merger that is to really include the Norfolk & Southern, the Atlantic & North Carolina, the Raleigh & Pamlico Sound and the Virginia & Carolina Coast railroad companies. The plan afoot constitutes one of the biggest railroad combinations ever made in this State. The Raleigh & Pamlico Sound Company is now building from Raleigh to Washington, N. C., via Wilson. The Norfolk & Southern and the Atlantic & North Carolina are already among the most important lines in Eastern Carolina and the Virginia & Carolina Coast road forms an important connecting link and feeder in the system that it is expected to be formed by the merger.

The Supreme Court will follow the usual custom next week and not hold a session on Tuesday—election day—and will call Eleventh district cases on Wednesday morning.

An aged white man, having one leg and one arm, who was engaged as ticket collector for a ferris wheel in the midway of the Negro State Fair here, was set upon by a young negro who threw a rock striking the old man on the head and inflicting an ugly wound. It is claimed that the negro was trying to beat a ride on the wheel. He escaped without his identity being discovered. This afternoon the State Fair management adopted a resolution denouncing the conduct of the negro and others who declined to disclose the negro's identity and offered $25 reward for the arrest and conviction of the fellow. The offering of the reward was at the suggestion of State Superintendent of Public Instruction J. Y. Joyner, who was present when the resolutions were offered. Supt. Joyner told them that the offering of the reward would be a more forcible expression of real condemnation of such outrages.

SENT OUT HIS EMISSARIES.

So far as the effect goes, President Roosevelt may as well have gone on the stump in the campaign now about closed. He declined to take a hand in New York and Pennsylvania, but he sent the members of his cabinet around the circle to represent him. He thus aided and abetted them in the prostitution of their high official positions to partisan political ends. He has also done other political tricks, notably among which was the appointment of a Democratic Jew of New York as a member of his cabinet, on the eve of an election, the manifest purpose of which, as many Northern papers express it, was to catch the Jewish vote for the election of Hughes in New York. Mr. Straus, the new cabinet member accepted the cabinet portfolio tendered him, and at once joined the President's other cabinet members making political speeches.

President Roosevelt did fail to send any of his cabinet emissaries into Pennsylvania for good and powerful reasons, but he sent Secretary Root to New York and other secretaries elsewhere. In political speeches at Republican rallies at Beverly and Salem, Mass., last Wednesday, Attorney General William H. Moody, said among other things:

"I am investigating the great and powerful coal and oil combinations at the present time. I will have no hesitation, if I find no grounds of illegal combinations, to say so, and on the other hand, if there are grounds to work on, I will proceed without regard to personal or political consequences. Mr. Havemyer, the sugar man says that the tariff is the mother of trusts. It isn't the tariff that is them other of trusts—it is the railroad rebate that is the mother of trusts and all of its collateral relatives."

Mr. Moody, who was speaking particularly for the re-election of Congressman Augustus P. Gardner in the Sixth Massachusetts District, explained that he was there at the expressed and earnest request of President Roosevelt.

There we have it from Moody own lips that he was sent, and on last Thursday night at Utica, N. Y. Secretary Root announced that he was there as Roosevelt's mouthpiece to denounce Hearst. The country has never before witnessed such political interference from the White House and some day the people will begin to look on it as a serious matter that the President of all the people shall make of his high office the head of a partisan machine.

With it all we cannot help but hark back to Moody's Massachusetts speech. Observe, if you please, the palpable manner in which he sidesteps the question as to the mother of trusts. He declared that it was the railroad rebate, plumply disputing Mr. Havemeyer of the Sugar Trust, who said it is the tariff and knows what he is talking about.

ORIGIN OF OUR PROSPERITY.

Right on the eve of an election it was a piece of intolerable "foreign interference" for a prominent English banker to give out the truth about the cause of prosperity in the United States. Furthermore, it was terribly unfortunate for the claim-all Republican party that his views should be cabled to the newspapers of the United States.

A cablegram from London on Thursday announced that E. H. Holden, head of the London City and Midland Bank, one of the most powerful English financial organizations, has just returned from a tour of the United States, where he was much impressed by what he characterized as the great and general prosperity, which he believes has its origin in the bountiful harvests of the past few years.

Asked whether trade activity or speculation was the primary cause of New York's recurring financial stringency, he declared himself strongly of the belief that it was the trade activity coupled with an imperfect banking system. He made some suggestions for financial reform over here and declared that in traveling about the country one is impressed with the great amount of gold used in manufactures. As the country grows more and more gold will be required, he said, but he emphasized the fact that all the requirements in this country were based upon the bountiful harvests of cotton in the South and grain in the West. No doubt he laughed at the Republican spellbinders if he heard any of them making the absurd claim that our prosperity is due to the Republican party.

—Hearst compares himself favorably with all the big Democrats from Thomas Jefferson to Samuel J. Tilden. He stops there doubtless because the big Democrats since Tilden are mostly alive and would likely defend themselves. — Philadelphia Press (Rep.)

—Maxim Gorky has again struck his level and at the same time his pace. He is in Italy making speeches to Italian Socialists and anarchists and is being received with open arms. The Socialists and anarchists on the other side of the ocean understand Gorky, but Americans didn't and didn't want to.—Savannah News.

—Senator Overman's friends ought not to hurt themselves trying to elect Hackett to Congress. Hackett is one of Bob Glenn's right-hand supporters, and will more than likely do all that he can to defeat Overman and elect Glenn to the Senate. If he should be re-elected he would control the Democratic delegation from the Eighth district both in the State convention and in the Legislature, and it goes without saying that he would line them up against Senator Overman.—Greensboro Weekly Tar Heel, (Rep.)

—A favorite sport with American girls of great wealth and social aspirations has been title-hunting in Europe; and when they have become the bride of Lord Deliverus or the Duchess of Drinkborough their American sisters have looked upon their splendor with envious eyes. But when the lights have gone out, and these alliances have been stripped of their tinsel and gauze, they have not infrequently disclosed a harsh reality that is enough to make American women shudder.—Baltimore Sun.

Four Hundred Years Ago

Dandelion was used by the Aarbs as a blood purifier. To-day it is used by every medical man through out the world because every physician knows that it is one of the most valuable and effective all of Nature's remedies. On most prescriptions for pills and tablets you will see the words Ext. Tarax, Q. S., this means Extract of Dandelion, sufficient quantity. A doctor's prescription costs you anywhere from $1.00 to $5.00 and it is generally worth the money. Dr. Edward's Dandelion Tablets or Pills cost 25 cents for a box of thirty and they are always worth the money because they are a certain cure for those diseases for which they are recommended.

Get a trial package free of cost from the drug store named below and test them yourself.

What Dandelion Tablets and Pills Are

Everybody knows that Dandelion is the most valuable of all Nature's remedies. Well, Dr. Edward's Tablets and Pills are simply common dandelion (Taraxicum) in a concentrated form, combined with other harmless ingredients of purely vegetable matter. They are one of the very few proprietary medicines endorsed by the medical profession. If your physician desires to know what these preparations contain, have him write us and we will gladly send him the information together with the name of the expert chemist who superintends their manufacture.

Diseases Cured by Dandelion Tablets and Pills

Constipation

In constipation the Tablets act as a mild cathartic; the Pills are slightly stronger, but both tablets and pills act upon the mucous membranes of the intestines, therefore their action is absolutely sure and also for this reason they never gripe or cause the least discomfort. They are equally good for children as well as adults, because they are a tonic and do not produce any unnatural condition of the bowels

Stomach Trouble

The Tablets are the best to use in cases of Stomach Trouble which take the form of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, etc., because they tone up the system and stimulate the flow of gastric juice, thus very effectively aiding the digestive organs to perform their proper functions. Their mildly cathartic action also relieves the stomach of all refuse and undigested matter.

Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism

All Kidney trouble and nearly every case of Rheumatism is due to the presence of uric acid in the blood. Dr. Edward's Dandelion Pills through their direct action upon the Liver and Kidneys restore these organs to a sound and healthy condition. The uric acid then passes away through the natural channel and the blood becomes pure again and free from all poisonous matter.

We only guarantee to cure Rheumatism when it is caused by the presence of uric acid in the blood. We have cured hundreds of cases because this is usually the cause of rheumatic affections.

Liver Trouble

Through their direct aad immediate action upon the liver Dr. Edward's Dandelion Tablets and Pills induce a natural flow of bile. This relieves the congested condition of the liver and enables it to perform its important work of keeping the bowels and stomach in a healthy condition.

Nervous Trouble

It is well to remember that disordered nerves are nearly always caused by a disordered stomach. We do not make a specialty of nervous troubles unless they are caused by stomach trouble—then we cure them permanently.

"Dancing one's way into popularity" is not a new accomplishment. Silhouetted here and there through the years of modern amusement history are the names of dainty, clever, nimble-footed women who have won their way into the hearts of the public by their poetic pose and graceful gyrations in the dance. There have not been many stars of the first magnitude in this galaxy of tripping terpsichoreans, but those who—like the great Fanny Elisler, the German danseuse—have basked in the high-light of popular favor, have won fame that will be perpetuated through many generations of amusements lovers.

In recent years the number of really effulgent terpsichorean stars has been notably small. It was therefore a matter of surprise and also for felicitation that in Berlin last Winter,, there literally burst upon the public a company of dancers of such surpassing merit—such airy grace and athletic nimbleness as to constitute the most sensational amusement feature that the German capital had seen in years.

The troupe consisted of seven young girls and one man. Three of the girls impersonated male characters, the others wore skirts. Their costuming was not only novel and unique, but also beautiful beyond comparison. The usually unemotional Berlinese newspapers raved over the new sensation and the Winter Garden, where the Vorlops appeared, was crowded at every performance to see their startling "Dance du Tourbillon."

An act that could create such a genuine furore in the German metropolis was considered sufficiently meritorious even for the Greatest Show on Earth, and it was secured. The price, if announced, would fairly stagger the American public. That the money has, however, been well spent, is attested by the enthusiasm that this remarkable dance has created in the United States. There has been nothing equal to it in a decade.

The Anglicized meaning of the "Dance du Tourbillon" is the "Dance of the Whirlwind." The name is not overdrawn. No other words could so fitly express the grace, the rapidity and the wild abandon of the terpsichorean revel. It begins with a series of quiet, poetic poses by two companies of the same troupe—four on each stage. The inaugural movements suggest nothing of the whirlwind. They are slow, rythmic, dreamy. It is a minuet—a graceful, radiant picture reflected from the days of the Directpire. Presently the movement is accelerated. The minuet merges into a waltz—the waltz intoa kind of Latinized Schottische—the schottische into the impassioned Dance du Folle—arms and head keeping time with the swiftly moving footsteps—the music swelling louder and faster, and still faster—in a stirring, fascinating, exhilarating frenzy of rotating motion.

The first movements serve to arrest the attention of the audience. The effect is bewildering kaliedoscopic. It can only be described as a dizzy, dazzling, daringly-delightful delirium of movement.

And it "brings down the house." fhe great audience bursts into a roar of applause and the Vorleps, bowing and smiling their appreciation, greacefully retire. It is a triumph that comes to but few dancers—and that only once or twice in a generation. The Vorleps have literally "danced their way into the hearts of the audience."

The Vorlop dancers will be seen here for the first time Monday, November 12.

The Osman Stock Company which is pleasantly remembered from last season, will be the offering at popular prices at the Academy of Music all this week. The engagement begins to-morrow night with the presentation of "The Moonshiner's Daughter." It is a domestic melodrama in four acts and is bound to please. It is said the Osman company is much stronger than ever this season and the press in other cities where Mr. Osman has played this season has been unanimous in its praise of the attraction. Specialties between acts will be offered each night of the engagement and these are bound to prove a strong feature of the engagement.

A unique feature of the engagement for the week is the offer by the company to give four tickets for the week to the four ladies or gentlemen making the most words out of the name "Marguerite Osman," the pretty little soubrette whom the company is starring this year. The list may be left at the box office before noon Monday. The prices for the week will be 10c, 20c and 30c.

DOHERTY THE DIVIL

By SEUMAS MACMANUS

Copyright, 1906, by Seumas MacManus

AND he was a divil, if ever there was one in human shape, was Hughey. No divilment, no mischief of any shape, make or form, was too bad for him. He was up to all sorts of trickery and cheating and deludhering and blarneying by means of which he could either gain a something for himself or, what seemed to satisfy him fully as much, make a laughingstock of a decent Ballynapookaite. As Mick Neddy Waury put it, he had "a baker's dozen of divils in him, iviry wan of them the size of a hedgehog." Doherty the Divil was in every one's mouth, and Doherty the Divil was feared by all. Still he continued to earn a good living all around Ballynapooka, because he was the principal miscellaneous laborer in the locality, and the good people who mistrusted him had very often to depend on him in a pinch.

Jemmy McGonnigle was that cross between a shopkeeper and a farmer which was the predominant type in Ballynapooka. In the springtime of the year Jemmy wanted his plot of sea wrack cut for the purpose of manuring the land. He was casting about for laborers to do the work, and, coming across an acquaintance, he asked him if he had lately seen Hughey Doherty.

"Why, what would yer be wantin' with Hughey Doherty now?" said Paddy Brogan.

"Why," said Jemmy, "it's in regards of the wee bit of wrack. There's a springtide the morra, an' I'd lake to have me wee plot cut."

"Are ye goin' with them yerself?"

"Well, no; I must look afther the shap. There's no wan to keep an eye to it if I went away."

"An' ye're goin' to send men down to cut yer wrack with no other head over them than Hughey Doherty an' expect iverything to go on right?" said Paddy cynically.

"Och," said Jemmy, with a confident shake of the head, "thrust me for that!" for Jemmy had the highest possible opinion of his own cleverness. "I'll not pay Doherty or a man of them till I see the last bud of wrack left up in the yard here with me."

"Well," said Paddy as he turned to go, still doubtfully shaking his head, "maybe it'll be all right enough."

"Blatheration, Paddy!" said Jemmy. "Sure when I see the wrack there with me own eyes what more do I need? How could Doherty thrick me then?"

"Oh, I don't know how he could thrick ye," said Paddy. "All I know is that he's fit to thrick the very ould divil himself. Howivir, I dare say maybe ye'll escape."

"Escape!" laughed Jemmy derisively. "Escape! Throth, Paddy, ye'll find Jemmy McGonnigle too cute a bird to be caught nappin'. Doherty couldn't or daren't thrick me."

Jemmy soon found out Doherty and engaged him for the following morning. At the appointed hour all the laborers were assembled at Jemmy's house receiving orders from the cute bird, the master, preparatory to setting out for the scene of their day's labor, which was along the coast some four miles distant. Now, cutting wrack differs from other employments, insomuch as the hours during which the laborers work must necessarily be regulated by the tide. The rocks on which the crop of wrack grows are more or less laid bare by the receding tide, but it is only at springtide that the whole extent is bared, and consequently only at springtide is it cut, the men commencing their work as the tide goes out and being forced to quit it, of course, as the tide again returns. This being so, laborers employed at this work have generally finished at an early hour, and employers who are economical give them no dinner till they return from their work at the early hour in the evening. Then by giving them a final meal one meal in the day is saved.

Jemmy McGonnigle, as a matter of course, being a cute bird, came under the economical head. Hughey Doherty suspected that and remarked in a naive manner as he was departing that he suspected the shore would be a hungry country that day. But Jemmy took no notice of the remark whatsoever. Accordingly Hughey had to come closer to the point.

"What time," said he, "will we be afther expectin' the dinner down?"

"Dinner!" said Jemmy in affected surprise. "Is it a dinner ye'd be axin' down to the shore to ye, an' it no time till ye be up here agane? Upon me socks, if ye wait at the shore till a dinner goes down to ye, ye'll be aitin' the whangs out of yer boots afore it raiches ye. Dinner, indeed! Ye will get a dinner, an' a thumpin' good wan too. It'll be smokin' hot on the table for ye whin ye come back."

"Throth, then," said Hughey, "we'll be hungry afore we raich back here."

"That's all the betther," said Jemmy. "Ye'll be able to ait the more. The big mill's grindin' away, an' as long as there's a grain of corn to go into the hopper don't be afeerd of bein' the worse of hunger."

"Aye, but"— began Hughey.

"The big mill's grindin' away!" interrupted Jemmy.

"But consither"— began Hughey again.

"The big mill's grindin' away!" said Jemmy.

"The hunger 'll"— again essayed Hughey.

"Don't mention hunger," said Jemmy, "for the big mill's grindin' away!"

"Throth," said Hughey to his fellow workmen as they proceeded on their journey, "he can afford to have his wee joke at our expense this mornin' an' laugh at it; but niver you mind. My name isn't Hughey Doherty if I don't make him laugh out of the wrong side of his mouth yet."

They reached the scene of their labors, and wrought away diligently for a number of hours, for they had been made aware by Jemmy that, as he could not accompany them to the work, he would not pay them until he should see the wrack in the yard and thus satisfy himself that they had honestly earned a day's pay. When it approached 12 o'clock Hughey straightened himself, looked at the sun and then remarked that he considered it a fair dinner time.

"Faix, indeed, it is all that," said several of the men as they proceeded with their work, "but we may whistle for our dinner."

"By no manes," replied Hughey as, to the astonishment of his companions, he proceeded to invest himself with his coat. "By no manner of manes. It's bether to call for it than whistle for it any day. Come along, men. I thought I heerd some of yez pass the remark that yez was hungry."

"So, inthrogs, we did. But where are ye goin', or what do ye mane? Sure there was no dinner ordhered for us."

"Not lakely," said Hughes. "But, sure, they say, 'God helps them that helps themselves.' When no wan ordhered it for us, sure, thanks be to Providence, we can ordher it for ourselves."

"An' who, in the name of all that's wonderful, is goin' to pay for it?"

"Who should pay for it, I'd lake to know, but the ould curmudgeon we're cuttin' the wrack for."

"But sure"—

"Now, let there be no more 'buts' about it. The matter comes to this: I'm goin' to ait a dinner at the ould niggard's expinse, an' a hearty dinner it's goin' to be. If there's any wan else hungry an' in need of a dinner, let him come with me."

Hughey had said enough. Every man instantly jumped into his coat and trotted after the chief conspirator. Hughey proceeded direct to Billy Conaghan's, a house situate close to where they were employed, and, entering, with a crowd at his heels, addressed Billy and his good woman with the usual salutation. He then went about assiduously seating his men. When he had this done he turned to Billy and said:

"I suppose, Billy, it's ready? Or did we come in too soon on ye?"

"What's ready?" asked Billy wonderingly. "What is it, avic?"

"What—what is this?" said Hughey, apparently equally surprised. "Ye don't mane to say that he didn't come to tell ye?"

"Who didn't come? To tell me what?" queried the mystified Billy. "Divil take the wan I seen the day come to tell me anything!"

"Well, this is a purty how-de-do!" said Hughey, addressing his companions. "An' us thinkin' we had nothin' to do but sit down to the table an' take it. Do you mane to say," said Hughey, again addressing his discourse to Billy—"do you mane to say that brat didn't give ye Mr. McGonnigle's message?"

"I mane to say," said Billy, evidently commencing to understand, "that I got no message, bad, good or indifferent, from man or mortal the day."

"Well, that bangs Banagher," said Hughey meditatively, shaking his head at the floor. "Why, it's full two hours ago since Misther McGonnigle dispatched a youngster of Hughey Hamilton's express to yer house, Billy, to warn ye to have the best dinner yer house could afford—an' that would be a good wan," he remarked parenthetically, casting an upward glance at the flitches of bacon that hung from aloft. "The best dinner, I say, yer house could afford for us. What's that ye say?" said Hughey, questioning an imaginary remark supposed to have been interjected by a companion behind him. "Throth, an' yer just right," said he, replying to this imaginary speaker. "That's just what the young brat has done—gone to Hughey Conaghan's, at the other en' of the hill. Well, we're sorry, Misther Conaghan," said Hughey, rising, "that we put ye to this bother, but I suppose we'll have to make the best of our way to Hughey's, an', faix, it's no such dinner he'll give us as what ye and yer good woman could provide for us."

"Don't you make no mistake."

"Hould on, yez," said Billy, himself and his wife interposing themselves between the hungry men and the door, for the thought of losing the pay for a dozen diuners was a stunner. "Hould on, yez! If yez just sit down for ten minnits, Nancy here'll lay yez out a dinner that Hughey Conaghan or wan belongin' to him couldn't hould a cannel to. She'll wet a dhrop of prime tay an' throw some eggs an' bacon on the pan an' give ye as good as the house can give ye in iviry way, an' if yez don't say yez have got a good dinner an' that yez are glad yez didn't go to Hughey Conaghan's when yez are done, then call me a liar."

"Aye, but," said Doherty, seeming to hesitate, "consider the loss poor Hughey Conaghan 'll be at."

"Och, divil take him an' his loss," said Billy. "What need yez care? Sure yez didn't ordher dinner from him."

"Well, I dare say that's true," said Doherty. "An' sure, afther all, if there's any wee thing to be made out of it, I'm sure we would all wish it to yerself, Billy, afore any other man in Doorin."

"Thank ye! Thank ye, Misther Doherty!" said Billy, profuse in his gratitude. "Throth, I'll give yez a rousin' good dinner, an' when yez have finished I have a wee bottle that I'll let yez know the taste of."

In a very short time Hughey and his companions were seated around a table on which Nancy had spread what proved to be all that Billy had promised for it, "a rousin' good dinner," and no mistake. Hughey, both by word and example, encouraged his companions to lay in a sea store, so to speak. As it was at the "ould niggard's expinse," he whispered, they'd make him pay for "more nor he conthracted for."

"By my faix," said Hughey Doherty as he wiped his mouth and drew his chair toward the fire for the purpose of lighting his pipe, "I ait worse dinners than that same in me time. Isn't it a marcy, boys, that we didn't go to the other Conaghan's? He could give us no such slashin' dinner as that. Now, Billy, me man," said Hughey as he rolled the tobacco betwixt his hands preparatory to putting it in his pipe—"Billy, me boy, don't you make no mistake about it, but charge Misther McGonnigle enough for that dinner."

"Oh, I'll watch that," said Billy.

"Let me see!" said Hughey meditatively. "If ye wor to ax me now what was the laist a man could, in common daicency, charge for sich a dinner as yer good woman is afther layin' afore us I would say that if ye wanted to put Misther McGonnigle onder a compliment ye might allow yerself to be at a bit of a loss an' only ax tinpince aich."

"But, Misther Doherty," interposed Billy, who really was amazed at the entertainment being set down at such a (to him) high figure.

"I know, I know, Billy Conaghan!" said Hughey hastily. "Sure that's what I know—that ye couldn't at all afford to do it at the money—nor no one could unless they stole the matayriels. But, sure, didn't ye hear me say that ye might only charge that if ye wanted to put Misther McGonnigle ondher a compliment to ye an' that I knew ye'd be losin' by it? But I don't expect ye're goin' to be so foolish as to lose by him. So, ondher the sarcumstances, the very laist ye can charge him so as to have any wee profit at all—an' faith a wee profit it will be—would be a shillin' aich."

"A shillin' aich!" said Billy, opening his eyes in astonishment.

"Yis, a shillin' aich. I see ye're astonished at it, and throth it's too little, it is intirely, I know, but still, Billy," said Hughey in a confidential tone, "atween ye an' me, McGonnigle is a hard ould naygur about money an' if ye charged him any more—though by right I know it's 15 pince ye should be axin'—it's maybe somewhere else he'd be ordherin' the dinner nixt time."

"But, Hughey, ahaisge!" said Billy, "What I mane is that I thought that twicet too much."

"Say that agane, Billy!" said Hughey, in his turn looking as amazed as Billy.

"Well," said Billy deprecatingly, "ay coorse I don't know what is the ragler charge in the town, but I thought a shillin' twicet too much."

"Twicet—too—much!" said Hughey, turning around to his companions and punctuating each slowly uttered word with a shake of his head. "Twicet—too—much! Ha, ha, ha, ha! Boys, are yez listenin' to what Billy says? Twicet—too—much! A shillin' a man twicet—too—much! The best of bread, butther an' tay, with rashers an' eggs an' a dhrap of as rale stuff as ivir I tasted to wash them down! Twicet—too—much! An' we aitin' as much as would feed a score of pigs for a fortnight. Look at Long Andy's waistcoat! Do ye see him burstin' the buttons off it, the glutton swelled himself so much, an' then to charge that man a shillin'. Billy—poor, simple omadhaun!—considers twicet—too—much! Why, Billy, man, ye're as good as a play."

"Och, all right then! All right!" said Billy as all in the house joined in the laugh at him. "Sure yez knows best. I'll charge whativir is plaisin' to ye."

"Yis, sartinly," said Hughey, "a shillin' a man is too mortial little, but seein'—as I sayed afore—the niggard of a man ye have to dail with, ye'll have to do with it. An' another point I want to put ye up to now, Billy."

"What's that?" said Billy.

"McGonnigle, the blaggard—the ould rascal—he niver likes to see a ha'penny laivin' his shop. He'll be expectin' ye to take goods to the amount of what ye have agane him."

"Och, that's all right," said Billy. "The goods 'll just be the same as the money."

"Av coorse, as I sayed afore, the shillin' a man is too little; but still, McGonnigle—the ould vagabond—he begridges to pay anybody anything if he can at all help it. If he had the ordherin' of his own coffin I b'leeve he'd chait the carpenther out of the price of it, an', as it is, I would a'most take me book onth that when he's dyin' he'll lay his commands behin' him for them to buy the coffin on tick, an' nivir pay if they can help it."

"Is that the sort of the villain?" said Billy. "Meself nivir had any dailin's with him."

"So much the betther for ye, Billy agrah!" said Hughey. "An' may ye long remain so. Now, as I was tellin' ye, ye'll have to ordher goods to the amount of iviry farthin', an, for fear of the worse, ye needn't mintion this wee bill ye have agane him for the dinner till ye have got yer goods parceled an' papered an' bundled up. Then get them ondher yer oxster [arm] tight; tell him that in regards to the wee dinner he ordhered for Hughey Doherty an' the other eleven men that day they wor cuttin' wrack for him—tell him that at the low charge of a shillin' a head for the twelve that lays ye an' him square. Then ye can bid him good mornin' an' laive him, for I promise ye he'll curse a bit, whoivir sees him, at havin' been thricked into payin' a debt—a thing he was nivir yet guilty of only when he couldn't help it."

"All right, Hughey. An' thanky for yer advice," said Billy. "I'll obsarve it to the letther. Thrust Billy Conaghan, but he'll be able enough for the ould dodger."

Hughey and his companions now returned to their work and had the result of their labors carted to Jemmy's yard that night and then paid for. Jemmy took care to pay them a visit as they sat at this meal for the purpose of finishing the laugh at the way in which he baffled Hughey on the dinner question in the morning.

"Well, Hughey," said he as he stood by the kitchen table whereat Hughey and his fellow workmen were helping themselves as well as they could to the eatables before them—"well, Hughey, didn't I tell ye that ye wouldn't be a bit the worse of the hunger so long as the big mill was grindin' away? I'll wager ye a big button to a boxty scon that it was the ricollection of that wee bit of consylation that supported ye all day."

"Faith, then," said Hughey, biting an enormous half moon out of a slice of bread and winking round the table at the same time, "I doubt ye'd won yer wager. It was just the ricollection of them same words that supported me—an' more than me too. Eh, boys?" And he winked again.

In the course of a very few weeks after that Billy Conaghan dropped into Misther McGonnigle's establishment, where he was warmly welcomed by the proprietor, who saw in Billy a new customer. Ere Billy was many minutes in, too, Jemmy McGonnigle was felicitating himself on having secured a most exceptionally good customer, for it was not in ha'porths and penn'orths, like the average men who patronized him, that Billy ordered his goods.

"How much is that I have got now? Will ye kindly make up?" said Billy as he looked with pleasure on a miscellaneous pile of goods before him.

"Sartinly, Misther Conaghan!" said Jemmy, dancing most obsequious attendance on Billy. "That comes to jist elivin an' a ha'penny. Anything else I can do for ye?"

"Yis," said Billy after pondering what else he should get, for he had already ordered every description of goods he could think of. "Yis, Misther McGonnigle, ye can give me elivin pince-ha'penny worth of clay pipes."

"Laives us square!"

"Elivin pince-ha'penny worth of clay pipes!" said Jemmy, opening his eyes amazedly. But, checking himself the next minute, he proceeded to execute the order with alacrity.

"Oh, I see," said he as he papered up the bundle of pipes, "it's a wake ye have, Misther Conaghan."

"Well, no, thanks be to Providence," said Billy. "But, plaise God, I hope to have wan some day."

Jemmy could not restrain himself from laughing heartily at this last pious hope and the foresight that prompted it. When Billy had got all tied up and firmly placed under his arms, in pursuance of Hughey's advice, he remarked to Jemmy, who stood waiting for the cash:

"I'm thinkin', Misther McGonnigle, that laives me an' ye about square now."

"Laives us square!" cried Jemmy. "What do ye mane, Misther Conaghan? That's 12 shillings ye owe me."

"'Tis, but that dinner ye ordhered for Hughey Doherty an' the other men that day they wor down cuttin' the wrack for ye that was a shillin' a head for twelve, an', ye see, it laives us both now clear. It's mighty thankful I am to ye, too," said Billy continuing, "for ordherin' the dinner at me house, an' I hope ye'll continye to favor

There may have been those who did not eagerly anticipate last Wednesday as Halloween, but their hearts must have grown old prematurely. Joyous youth and maidens made it their especial effort to arouse interest in the time honored custom. The usual flour, rice and beans flew about in confusion. Less strenuous revelers attended parties and bobbed for apples and participated in the usual games.

Of those who gave entertainments, Mr. and Mrs. Hazelhurst were host and hostess of one of the most enjoyable events of the evening at their hospitable home on Grace between Fifth and Sixth street and their guests were Miss Nellie Woodward, Miss Kate Yarborough, Miss Keith Covington, Miss Elizabeth Woodward, Miss Polly Stewart, Miss Shepperd, Miss Gully, Miss O'Hanlon, Mr. Joseph T. From the Baltimore Sun of Thursday we clip the following which is of interest here: "A marriage of interest was solemnized yesterday at 12:30 o'clock, when Miss Ida Evans Randolph, daughter of the late Wilton Randolph, was married to Mr. Thomas Childs de Rosset, of Baltimore, formerly of Wilmington.

"The ceremony took place at the chapel of Emmanuel Protestant Episcopal church in the presence of the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends. The rector, Rev. J. Houston Eccleston, officiated. The bride entered the church with her cousin, Mr. Harold Randolph, by whom she was given in marriage, and was met by the groom, attended by his best man, Mr. Harry Carland, of New York. She wore an exquisite gown of white crepe de chine and duchess lace. Her tulle veil was caught with orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of lillies of the valley. Miss Louise Randolph, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. She wore a dainty costume of yellow cloth and lace and carried yellow chrysanthemums.

"The ushers were Mr. Henry Peschau, of Wilmington, N. C., Mr. William Klump, of New York; Mr. John F. Symington and Mr. Charles J Symington, of Baltimore.

"A reception followed at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Randolph, 28 East Preston street, after which Mr. and Mrs. de Rosset left for a wedding journey. On their return they will reside at the Walbert.

"Among the out of town guests were Mrs. T. C. de Rosset, Miss de Rosset, Mrs. F. W. Dick, Miss Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Donald McRae, Miss Calder, of Wilmington, N. C.; Miss Brannon, of Boston; Mrs. W. S. Sadler, of Richmond, and Mrs. Marian Randolph, of Albany, N. Y."

The Louisville Courier Journal, in its leading society events, publishes the following which is of much interest here and which comes as a pleasant surprise to Mr. Morton's vast number of friends:

"Mr. and Mrs. Robert Coleman Thompson, formerly of Louisville, but now living in Charleston, W. Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mildred Gracy Thompson, to Mr. George Lee Morton, of Wilmington, N. C.

"The wedding will be solemnized on December 11."

The bride elect is a young woman of the brunette type who is very popular wherever she is known and adds and holds friends by a charm of manner for which she is known. As is generally known here Mr. Morton is exceedingly popular, being prominent in club life, business, politics, and other walks of life. His friends will shower him with congratulations and will wish for him the happiness of which they think him justly deserving.

PLAIN ANSWER TO A QUESTION

Editor Fairbrother, of "Everything," Pays Deserved Tribute to Cure. Knows Its Origin and Witnessed Its Great Work.

(From Fairbrother's "Everything.")

We have been asked by several of our readers why we are always giving the Keeley Cure a friendly word, and never have anything to say concerning the other numerous so-called cures which now and then come before the public. The Keeley Cure is understood to be a cure for the whiskey habit and drug addictions. Viewed from a strictly ethical stand-point we do not know as it should be the concern of anyone what our views are on things in general nless we choose to write regarding them. Our publication is a periodical which deals with the things which happen—and it is up to us to choose our subjects; to hand down our views; to attempt in our way to preach a moral for good, and to aid wherever we can to uplift humanity; to make the world better; to labor to the great end of adding happiness to the tired heart and bringing brightness to darkened homes. In our defence of the Christian religion we have not been asked by but few of our readers to give them space that they might exploit their views from an agnostic's standpoint; we have received but one letter from an out and out infidel, while several gentlemen of culture and attainments write us that they are atheists and do not endorse many things which we write concerning God. We have always felt that all men were entitled to their opinion—and we have ever insisted that we were entitled to our opinion. We have never, with knowledge, been offensive—we have ever tried to stand up and with all our vigor defend our lews—according to all men and women the right to disagree with any proposition that we might lay down.

It may be information to many of those who read these pages to know that within the last 27 years since Dr. Leslie E. Keeley came before the public with his marvelous scientific cure for drunkenness and drug additions some four hundred other men have exploited so-called cures. Some of them are running to-day—some ran for a few years—but the majority have fallen by the wayside. The men who patronized them may have been temporarily benefitted; other may have felt that they had received treatment that excelled any other treatment on the market—but be that as it may the greater number of the fakirs col the Keeley Cure is, first, because the lapsed owing bills and discredited. The reason we have been partial to discoverer. Dr. Leslie E. Keeley, was a man or rare mental attainments. He was not only a physician of deep learning, but he was a man of the world and knew humanity. He was not only a doctor of medicine but he was a doctor of lows—and carried with authority the letters M. D. and LL. D., after his name. He was a surgeon in the army and was also surgeon for the Chicago and Alton railroad—and for 20 years before giving his remedies to the public, he gave the subject of alcohol and drugs his special attention and went to the very bottom of the well of investigation, determining their effects upon the human system. When his cure was first heralded to the world by that veteran editor Joseph Medill of the Chicago Tribune, the people in the Northwest believed what he wrote and the Keeley Cure at once became a household word. There were started in the West many sanitariums or institutes as they were called and hundreds of men in all walks of life took advantage of the great discovery. We knew personally many men addicted to drink and drugs who took the treatment and were cured—and who remained cured for the years that we knew them; they were lifted from a life of drunkenness and debauchery, placed in the fair fields of human endeavor and became useful citizens. And when we would make a visit to the West we still on the water wagon; still happy and still prosperous. So it was that when we came to the South some 15 years ago we knew a great deal about the Keeley Cure. When the institute was started in Greensboro, North Carolina, we were the first among the newspaper men of the South to welcome it and stand for the statement that it would do all that was claimed for it. And all that Dr. Keeley ever claimed for his remedies was that they would destroy the craving for drugs—and this they will do. Over 400,000 men and women in the United States and England will testify to this fact—for that number has been benefited. At the Keeley Institute in Greensboro, North Carolina over 4,000 patients have been treated in the last 15 years and if, under oath, each one was asked if the craving for drink had not been entirely eradicated, the in 3,990 cases out of the 4,000 would be that it had. Of the numerous fake concerns that have appeared, and disappeared there were all sorts of stories afloat—and from personal observation we know of some disastrous experiences. Never shall we forget that one of our best friends—we name him for he wouldn't care, John M. Moan, of Nebraska, a brilliant man, a distinguished lawmaker; a brother to all distressed; a man of means and a man with a heart as large as his body, concluded that he would cut out whiskey—and he died in a fake cure joint in Chicago and his death was little better than murder. It may have been that those who were conducting the place were physicians and it may have been that they weere not. But we do know that never in the Keeley Institute in Greensboro, North Carolina, during the last 15 years has any patient died because of the treatment. No one but a licensed physician ever used a hypodermic syringe in administering Keeley remedies. Therefore, while we are not even suggesting remotely that any of the many cures now before the public are not all right—we shall insist that we know the Keeley Cure is all that is claimed for it; that it was discovered through scientific investigation by a man who was a physician of standing; it has been before the public for many years and among our personal acquaintances we know scores of people who took the treatment 10 and 12 and 15 years ago who have been sober to this day—who came from the gutter and who were reclaimed and who are useful citizens. That is why we insist that the Keeley is the cure to take—it has been tried and never found wanting in the claims made for it.

There are those who suggest that the patient who takes the Keeley cure will sometime relapse and go again to his debauched habits. That certainly is true—and because it is true, in no way discredits the treatment; in no way weakens the claim made for it. If it had not the virtues claimed by its discoverer, it would long ago have gone with the other cures which played out and which have been regarded and classed as fakes. You must remember that human nature is a strange compound—and it is weak and it errs. Because the man who found himself steeped deep in the slime of sin; who found that his heart was wicked and his soul was seared, finally heard through all the blackness of his life the voice of God calling him; and he heard and heeded and walked a penitent, to the mourner's bench and felt that he was saved; who asked the prayers of the men of God who stood around him and who went forth with the strength of the Christian's faith to battle in the war of life—soothed and sustained by that unfaltering trust which is a Christian's hope—tripped and fell in the snares of men—no one has been big enough to make the world believe that the religion of God—the religion of Christ was not all that had been claimed for it. The man who would denounce the Keeley Cure, if he knew the good it had done; if he knew personally the number of men and women it had saved—would with the same degree of consistency deny the efficacy of prayer and denounce the word of God as the murmurings of an impostor.

No, we are not advising people to take our advice, but we are saying that if you are addicted to the curse of whiskey or the se of drugs and if you want to be cured and remain cured we do know that the Keeley Institute at Greensboro, North Carolina, can do the work. As to the other cures—they are numerous—they have the coffee cure, the mail order cure, the 10-day cure, the blue ribbon cure and most any cure that you are looking for—but when a man makes up his mind to be cured he had always better try something that has stood the test. We are not going to say that any of the numerous cures are humbugs—but we are going to suggest that it is a remarkable thing that it was not until Leslie E. Keeley came before the world with his cure that all these others appeared. The remedies used in the Keeley Cure are not known to any living men except the chemists of the Leslie E. Keeley Drug Company at Dwight, Illinois, and the president of that company. The formula is a profound secret and many fakirs have attempted to get something like it. Physicians in the employment of the Keeley company have quit their jobs and attempted to cure drunkenness and dismally failed. Other men have taken thetreatment and concluded that it was a cinch as a money maker and have started out and made big pretentions and they have gone out of business.

Whether these new schools con do what they claim we are not advised—we know that it is possible for a man to quit drinking whiskey of his own accord. But we would suggest that it seems a reasonable proposition that if a man were addicted to the use of alcohol or drugs to excess, it would be impossible to fully restore him under less than four or five weeks treatment. It takes that long to build up any system that is completely run down, and especially does it take time and medicine where the nervous system is shattered, as is always the case with the drunkard or the drug patient. The hypodermic syringe is exclusively used in Keeley Institutes—and medical science endorses the hypodermic treatment and in administering the Keeley remedies, hypodermically, there is no danger—because all the medicines are prepared exclusively at the Keeley laboratories, at Dwight, Illinois, under the supervision of the chemists who first compounded the remedies. The fact that no evil results have ever followed the hypodermic treatment when Keeley remedies have been injected, proves that they are safe as they are essential. When some of the Keeley imitators have started to use the needle they were forced to abandon it, because the poisoned drugs which they injected proved permanently injurious to their patients. In the hands of a Keeley physician using Keeley remedies the hypodermic needle has always proved absolutely safe.

If to-morrow we were going to consult a physician we would want to go to one who had graduated in medicine, and who had the documents to prove it. We would naturally want to go to one who had some reputation in his profession. We would want to go to a man who had scored success—and who had had experience. And if we wanted to go to an institute for the cure of alcoholism or drug addiction, we most assuredly would go to the Keeley Institute and would advise every other man to go Not that we would assail any other institution; not that we would suggest that other cures are impossible—but we would know of our knowledge that we were being treated at a place that had been for years recognized by the most learned men in the profession of medicine and science—and that it claimed to perform no miracles, but that it diagnosed the disease and was prepared to treat it intelligently and scientifically.

And above all, we would choose the Keeley Institute at Greensboro, North Carolina, because it has been running for over 15 years; it has treated over four thousand patients, hundreds of whom we know it cured and who staid cured; that patients from 20 different States, from New York to Texas have been in line, that its officers are most courteous; its physicians most capable; and when it comes to rooms and buildings—there is not a better equipped sanitarium in the United States. All in all the grounds are as beautiful as any to be found in the South; the buildings are spacious; bath in every room; steam heated; elegantly furnished and beds as fine as art and material can make them—every home comfort guaranteed and a table that is always filled with every delicacy of the season.

The man who needs treatment for whiskey or drugs can make no mistake in going to the Keeley Institute at Greensboro, North Carolina, and that is why, in answer to our questioners, that we advise the Keeley treatment in preference to all others.

Another thing worth mentioning here, and it may remotely suggest our partiality to the Keeley Institute at Greensboro, North Carolina, is the fact that to our knowledge it is not conducted alone to make money. Along with the commercial side there is the side of humanity and philanthropy. In the fifteen years that it has been under the spervision of Col. W. H. Osborn, as president of the company, it has done something like $50,000 worth of charity work. No man who was in earnest and who really wanted to be cured and who deserved treatment has been turned away because he did not have the money.

Through Col. Osborn's unselfish nature there was always been a way found to help the man who wanted to help himself.

Greensboro special, Nov. 1: Hon. W. W. Kitchin, Congressman from this district, made a fine speech to a fine audience that filled the court house here last night. His opponent for Congress, Postmaster C. A. Reynolds, of Winston, was in the city, but of course did not attend the speaking or join in the debate. As he always does, Mr. Kitchin, made a splendid argument on Democratic fundamental principles last night and thoroughly aroused his hearers to the necessity of maintaining and perpetuating them. After discussing National affairs, he took up State matters. He contrasted the two State conventions of the opposing political parties held here this year and the platforms they adopted mentioning two very important planks in the Democratic platform that were not in the Republican platform yet their convention met afterwards. Those planks were the declaration of the Democrats for reduction of freight and passenger rates and against the railroads meddling in politics by having paid lobbyists in the Legislative halls to work for legislation favorable to the corporations. He ridiculed the resolution adopted by the Republicans giving the executive committee thepower of distributing the Federal offices of the State. He said that if the Democrats had passed such a resolution there would have been severe criticisms, but nothing was said about the Republicans doing this for no one expected more of them.

Big Suit Against A. C. L. Instituted at Fayetteville.

The Fayetteville Observer of yesterday afternoon has the following:

"The complaint in the second largest damage suit ever known in this county, as we re call, was filed in the Clerk's office lately, by Messrs. Sinclair & Dye, attorneys for Capt. Geo. H. Napier. The plaintiff demands judgment for $100,000 against the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company for the loss of his right arm and other injuries sustained in the wreck of his train at Hope Mills last Winter. $125,000 were asked in the Pembleton suit some years ago, but this case was never tried, a compromise being effected. Capt. Napier is a resident of this city, and bought out the cafe and grocery opposite the A. C. L. depot last month.

"The complaint shows plaintiff to be 35 years old, formerly a railroad conductor, and that he earned from $100 to $120 per month. The 3rd and 4th allegations refer to the accident, which occurred on the morning of February 20th, 1906, in which Capt. Napier lost an arm."

A. C. L. TRAINS DELAYED.

Freight Wreck Near Columbia and Tender Afire on A. & Y.

On account of the wreck of several freight cars near Columbia, S. C., yesterday, the train from the South Carolina capital due here at 1:45 P. M. yesterday did not reach the city until nearly the same hour this morning. The freight wreck was quite a destructive one and required some time to be cleared. A train was made up at Sumter to transfer mail and passengers for the main line trains at Florence.

The A. & Y. train due here last night at 8 o'clock did not arrive until after 1 o'clock this morning. The tender of a freight train caught on fire on the Southern's end of the line and it was some time before the wreckage could be cleared from the track allowing the passenger train to pass.

To The Public.

To the Editor Star:—

I wish to state that the reflections made upon me and my jailer in the United States Court by Judge Purnell when I was not present were false and unjust in regard to the fare of prisoners in my custody in New Hanover county jail. The report of the grand jury of our county made at the September term of our court, and also the reports of previous grand juries, all composed of our best citizens, substantiate what I say. The question at issue is who is to be believed, the grand jury or the United States prisoners? Would not Judge Purnell have reflected more credit upon himself if he had investigated before hemad e such statements? I am willing for my record and his record to be published side by side and let the people of North Carolina say who is right in this matter.

FRANK H. STEDMAN,
Sheriff New Hanover County.

SPEAKING IN BRUNSWICK.

Hon. G. B. Patterson and Hon. N. A. Sinclair Closed Campaign There.

Hon. G. B. Patterson, Congressman from this district, was in the city yesterday, returning from Southport where he spoke on Friday night to a large audience, his visit to the little city by the sea amounting to little less than an ovation. A band of music rallied the staunch Democrats of the town and Mr. Patterson, according to all reports, made an excellent speech. Flaming posters distributed the day before his arrival announced Mr. Patterson as the "Pilot's Friend," which is a live issue at Southport again.

Hon. N. A. Sinclair, Democratic candidate for Solicitor in that district spoke at Shallotte, Brunswick county yesterday and was enthusiastically received. Hon. H. L. Godwin, who was here to accompany Mr. Sinclair to Shallotte, received a telegram summoning him back to his home at Dunn, N. C., on account of illness in his family. He regretted very much that he could not fill the appointment.

"THE ONE WOMAN" PLEASED.

Superior to the Clansman Was the Verdict of Quite Everyone.

"The One Woman," Mr. Thos. Dixon's new play, was witnessed by two large audiences at the Academy of Music yesterday matinee and night. It was the popular verdict of those who saw both performances that the play is much superior to the Clansman, which created such a furor last season. The scenic equipment was grand and every member of the cast was an artist. Few plays have been seen in Wilmington that gave such general satisfaction.

ARTHUR BRISBANE
MAN BEHIND THE GUN

"I notice a picture of Arthur Brisbane in one of the current magazines," said a seasoned New York newspaper man. "Few persons in the United States, outside of those in the newspaper business, could tell you out of hand just who Arthur Brisbane is. But everybody inside the newspaper profession has heard about him. Brisbane, to give him his briefest description and the most fitting one just now, is the young man who made Mr. Hearst. Nobody who knows the circumstances of his connection with Mr. Hearst's newspaper enterprise has the least doubt of this.

"He is, in addition, the highest salaried newspaper man on the globe. His salary as editor of Mr. Hearst's New York evening newspaper is said to be $52,000 a year. If you take a pencil and pad and figure out carefully, you will find that this means $1,000 a week—fair wages; but nobody in the business doubts, either, that Brisbane is worth that much to Mr. Hearst. In addition to his $52,000 a year, he is said to derive a percentage of the New York evening papers receipts. The story goes that Mr. Hearst promised him some years ago a percentage of the paper's receipts when the paper should pass its 500,000-a-day circulation mark. Brisbane pushed the paper past that figure and is deriving his part of the harvest.

As a matter of fact, though, Arthur Brisbane never needed to work at all. He was born well to do and could have lived very easily and worklessly on the bully good income with which he was provided at his birth. But he preferred to work, as men of brains must prefer. He was educated at one ofthe great universities being graduated before he was 20. When he was 20 he strode into the office of the New York Sun and asked for some work. The Sun then had, as it probably still has, its 'kinddergarten,' so called—that is, a school for embryo journalists. The likely looking young chap who looked as if he might turn out to be a newspaper man, was set to work doing unimportant little stunts at a salary of $15 a week. He was watched by his elders. If he made good he was put 'on space'—that is, he was attached to the regular staff and paid column rates for his stuff; if he didn't show the right kind of material he was gently dropped.

"Now, to show you what kind of an individual Arthur Brisbane was, and is, he stayed in the Sun's kindergarten just four months before he was put 'on space.' Then he joined the staff. At the end of one year after he had strolled into the Sun office and asked for some work Arthur Brisbane was the European correspondent of the New York Sun, and newspaper readers who like the best will remember the brilliant series of weekly letters he sent to the Sun while he was its European correspondent, and he had barely begun to shave, at that. I remember Brisbane very well when he was a cub reporter around New York—a slight, light haired youngster, with nothing remarkable about him apparently and extremely dudish in his dress; but he had a cold way of looking you right straight in the eye and a jaw that squared when he became earnest, and a pair of bard, close set lips and the general air, if you took the time to look him over under the surface of his dudish clothes, of a young fellow who was going to arrive.

"When he was recalled to New York by the Sun people to establish the New York Evening Sun he took to that task with the joy most men would experience in sitting down to a good dinner, and it was nothing for him to work eighteen hours a day. In the meantime—this story was given to me and I repeat it for what it is worth—he had become engaged to a famous western beauty, a girl destined to be worth many millions of dollars. The girl, it seems, had a somewhat domineering dispositon—the arrogance of wealth, not to put too fine a point up on it. After the engagement was announced, so it is said, she exhibited tendencies of this disposition, and the engagement was broken—that's all the gossips ever heard about it. But it is stated by persons who speak as with authority that Brisbane broke it himself.

"After leaving the Evening Sun he went to the New York World, of which he was managing editor for seven years. Then Mr. Hearst came along and took hold of the New York Journal, and Brisbane joined Mr. Hearst. Brisbane had always held socialistic ideas. His father before him had been a high-grade socialist, and young Brisbane got his beginning in the line right from headquarters. He was delighted to get a chance to air his theories, and Mr. Hearst gave him full sway. Everybody knows the result. Many persons who decry yellow journalism nevertheless get hold of the evening newspaper which contains Brisbane's editorials. He will write an editorial advising mothers how to take care of their babies in a scientific manner on one day, and on the next he will write a succinct account of the Darwinian theory of evolution. He is a genius for putting difficult facts in simple language. Loads of fellows have attempted to imitate his style, but none has succeeded at it.

"Brisbane is a tremendous force for temperance in New York, and he is arraigning the race tracks all the time in scorching editorials. His friends jolly him about this, but he maintains that no man in the position of a teacher has to practice what he preaches these modern days. 'I want them to do as I advise, not as I do,' he says. He gets all kinds of enjoyment out of life himself, and somebody even ascused him a year or so ago of owning some race horses himself. It is a cinch that he owns a whole lot of fine hunters, and he is one of the crack riders of Long Island. He belongs to the Four Hundred of New York. He is by birth an aristocrat and is always surrounded by people of the leisure class. Yet he enters the Hearst arena, with all that that implies, although it is pretty generally understood that he doesn't care to soil himself in that arena. He is only a little beyond forty today, and he has lived about three lives already. He loves to work, is hard as nails, a good athlete who has on seeral occasions shown bullies how dangerous a man he is to tackle, and, altogether, an unusual character. Those who know him well are very fond of him. I am of the opinion that he really believes a good deal of the socialistic doctrine that he writes. He probably knows that he overdoes the thing, but he says in essence as to this that he is compelled to write down to the groundlings to get them to understand what he means. There is no writing man in New York who wields a stronger power than Arthur Brisbane.—Washington Star.

The storm weather continues in Italy. The Tiber has overflowed its banks in the country districts, destroying cattle and is now threatening Rome. Venice is still under water and Gondolas are plying the Plaza San Marco.

J. Christian Eskilson, of Chicago, thrice supreme treasurer of the Danish Brotherhood of America, is missing and simultaneously it is found that from $40,000 to $50,000 of the order's funds are gone.

Acting-Secretary of the Treasury Keep yesterday stated at Washington, that a shortage of $61,500 had been found in the St. Louis sub-treasury, but when the shortage occurred or who is responsible for it he declined to state, saying that the matter was underinvestigation by treasury officials in conjunction with those of the Department of Justice.

Something You Should Know

We want the people of Wilmington and vicinity to know that the most valuable and delicious cod liver preparation known to medicine is Vinol.

Vinol contains all the medicinal elements of cod liver oil actually taken from fresh cods' livers, but not a drop of the useless, greasy oil to upset the stomach and retard its work, and to this is added peptonate of iron (tonic iron).

For this reason Vinol is recognized throughout the world as the greatest health restorer and strength creator known to medicine, and we do not believe there is a man, woman or child in Wilmington but what Vinol will benefit them at this season of the year.

Vinol creates health and strength for old people, weak, sickly women and children, nursing mothers, and after a severe sickness.

Vinol cures hacking coughs, chronic colds, bronchitis, and all throat and lung troubles.

Try Vinol on our offer to return money if it fails. Robt. R. Bellamy, Druggist.

NOTE—While we are sole agents for Vinol in Wilmington, it is now for sale at the leading drug store in nearly every town and city in the country. Look for the Vinol agency in your town.

ROCK CLIFF LITHIA SPRINGS WATER.

READ WHAT ONE OF THE MOST NOTED CITIZENS OF SOUTH CAROLINA HAS TO SAY OF THE FAMOUS ROCK CLIFF SPRINGS WATER.

Spartanburg, S. C., July 24.

To Rock Cliff Lithia Springs Co.:

Gentlemen:—This will certify that I was severely afflicted with a serious case of erysipelas, that confined me to my bed for about six months or more, with daily attendance of my physician, and which eventually settled in my left leg and became so severe that a consultation of three physicians was held and the decision reached that the lower part of my leg would have to be amputated to prevent the disease extending to the upper part of my leg and body. I declined the operation and was advised to try Rock Cliff Lithia Springs Water. I engaged board near the spring and was advised to bathe my leg in the water, at the same time drinking freely.

This application soon soothed the pain, and for the first time in months previous I slept for about two hours. After a week's treatment, without any medicine or physician's help, I walked to the spring on crutches. I continued the treatment daily, and within two weeks was able to walk to the spring without crutches and in four weeks was able to walk home, a distance of 1½ miles, and resume my official business.

I was permanently cured by the use of the water, and take great pleasure in giving you this testimonial to the efficiency of the Rock Cliff Springs Water in the treatment of erysipelas.

Winston-Salem special, Nov. 2.—The 10-year-old son of T. P. Burgess was killed late this afternoon in a peculiar manner. The boy was swinging on the rear of a coal wagon when the horses backed the wagon against a brick wall, crushing the boys head and producing instant death.

—Rocky Mount special, Nov. 2.—A peculiarly sad accident occurred last Saturday when Forest, the 14-year-old son of Mr. Joseph Farmer, fell from the wood house at the residence of Mrs. Leslie Powell, his stomach striking the fence underneath, and sustaining what it is feared may prove fatal injuries.

—Lenior special, Nov. 2.—Rev. J. H. Nelson is still unable to get any clue as to the whereabouts of his son, Lawrence, who disappeared about five weeks ago. Several Lenoir people have joined with Mr. Nelson in the search for his son, but to no avail. There is some reason to suspect foul play as the young man left with between $50 and $60 in his pocket.

—Littleton Times-Herald: An immense grape crop has been harvested at Medoc. This writer was informed by Mr. Vinson that the crop thought they would buy as many more they would buy as many more. It is It is a busy place.The old burned building has been replaced by a beautiful structure 45x145 feet and filled with casks that hold from 1,000 to 20,000 gallons each.

—Salisbury special, Nov. 2.—Mrs. Mary Cotton, aged 50 years, was run over and killed by a frieght train this afternoon. Washington special, Nov. 2.—The much mooted bridge matter has been disposed of for the present at least. Judge Thomas McNeill, before whom the case was argued last week, has announced his decision, which is to the effect that he will not grant the injunction asked for. The plaintiffs will appeal to the Supreme Court and the case will be fought out there.

—The Secretary of State on Friday chartered the Columbia Fish Canning Company, of Manteo, N. C. The object for which this corporation is formed is to engage in the business of canning packing and dealing in all kinds of fish, oysters, etc. The author ized capital stock is $50,000. —Oxford special, Nov. 2.—The neighborhood of Mountain Creek was shocked Saturday morning on account of an accident at the home of Mr. Matt Currin, which caused the instant death of his daughter, aged 19 years. Her small brother, about 13 years old, saw a squirrel up a tree close by the house, and ran into one of the rooms to get the gun to kill the squirrel. At the time Miss Hazel was cleaning up the room and as the boy ran out of the room the hammer of the gun struck the door facing and fired, the whole load entering the side of his sister.

—Lincolnton special, Nov 2—Rev. R Z. Johnson tendered his resignation as pastor of the Lincolnton Presbyterian Church on October 20, which has not yet been accepted. —New Bern special, Nov. 2.—Yesterday was the first day of the open season for duck and quite a number of nimrods went out for a day's sport and returned with some nice lots of birds. Hunters say that duck are not plentiful. Whatever the cold of the northern winter will do toward driving duck South remains to be seen yet. Among those who went out to try their luck were R. A. Richardson, his sons and Will Baxter, who went up Neuse river and killed 20 duck of the wood and teal variety. Dr. Jones R. B. Blalock and J. W. Timberlake bagged 28 birds; and Ed Clark killed eight birds.

—Raleigh News and Observer, Nov. 3.—A pitiful case that has in it much to arouse the sympathy of all has been found in Raleigh and the charitable are trying to alleviate the troubles of a girl bride who has been abandoned. The child, for she is but 13 years of age, has benn left here by her husband of a few days and her condition is a sad one. Col. F. A. Olds and others are at work raising money to send her to her home and donation to aid in this should be made freely. A lesson in charity in this case has been given by the girls of Col. Olds' "Sunshiners" each of whom has contributed 10 cents toward helping the child wife who has found her fate such a sad one.

—Releigh News and Observer, Nov. 3.—Harry West, the one armed and one legged ticket taker of the merry-go-round at the Negro State Fair, yesterday afternoon, shot at and wounded a negro man in the back. The negro is Sammy Brown and it was reported last night that he is the negro who on Thursday afternoon knocked West down with a rock, cutting him badly about the eye, but whose name had not before last night been known. Brown was taken to Rex. Hospital and the report from there is that he is shot in the back, though the physician in charge says the wound is not a dangerous one. Few details of the shooting could be learned last night, except that West recognized Brown as the negro who had knocked him down and began shooting while the negro ran. The assault of the negro on West, declared to be unprovoked, and simply because West wanted to collect fare for a ride on the merry-go-round, caused much indignation, but last night the expression was that West ought to have reported the man to the officers when he recognized him, and ought not to have tried to take the law into his own hands, as two wrongs do not make one right. The authorities of the Negro State Fair acted promptly in the matter of the assault made by the negro on West Yesterday morning at a meeting at which State Superintendent Joyner spoke, resolutions denouncing the act in the strongest terms were adopted by a rousing vote, these being offered by President J. B. Dudley of the negro A. & M., at Greensboro, which, on motion of Col. James H. Young a reward of $25 was offered for detection of them an. The spirit shown in the resolutions is to be commended in these, the negroes expressing indignation at the atack on a white man by a negro..

Ja A. There were pains all over me and I could not tell where they were to strike me. I used liniments and lots of remedies but nothing did me any permanent good until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Bellamy's drug store and used them. The Wrong Week.

Views of life are apt to be tinged by surroundings and circumstances which may be merely temporary. "Your son is of a cynical and pessimistic turn of mind, I'm sorry to see," remarked the supply minister to Mr. Lane of Centerville, with whom he was spending Sunday. "I deplore that tendency in the young men of today." And the minister looked sober, even severe.

"Well, now, I don't worry about Jim," said Mr. Lane, thoughtfully caressing his jaw. "You see, Addie Piper hasn't fully made up her mind yet to let him know that she intends to have him and not Lon Howe. Soon as he gets his bearings on that point and the girl settles down a bit, there won't be anything cynical or pessimistic left in Jim.

"You're here the wrong week, that's all. Lon Howe had this Saturday night. If you were going to be here next Sunday, you'd notice a consid'able lightening up in Jim's views. His mother and I do every other week."—Youth's Companion.

Not For Americans.

A well known New Yorker, a bit of a globe trotter, tells of a courier he once encountered in Switzerland while a member of a party of Americans and Englishmen. On the way over the St. Gothard pass for some distance the train moved along opposite a tremendously high precipice, over which a tiny stream flowed, almost losing itself in mist before reaching its course below. The courier, an extremely intelligent and clever chap, was entertaining the party with a recital of that stream's peculiarities. Later one of the party, an Englishman, told the others a story concerning a certain species of fish in the steam to the effect that, when it came to the edge of the precipice, it would curl itself up, put its tail in its mouth, and roll down, for all the world like a hoop.

"See here, Auguste," said the New Yorker who tells the story, "why didn't you yourself tell us about that fish?"

With a shrug Auguste replied: "I myself have heard the story and have told it. But I never tell it to Americans—they can tell pretty good lies themselves."—New York Times.

SOUTHERN WEALTH

TWo Billions in Excess of the Entire Property Value of the Union in 1866—Large Investments in Industrial Plants.

Baltimore Nov. 1.—In this week's issue of the Manufacturers' Record, estimates that the true value of real and personal property in the 14 States at present is at least $18,000,000,000 which is nearly $2,000,000,000 more than the true value of property in the whole country in 1860, with the South's population at present 4,000,000 or 5,000,000 less than the total population of the country in 1860. It says:

"Assessments of Alabama property this year are $373,468,462, an increase over those of 1905 of $29,244,241. The increase in 1905 over 1904 was $21,345,428. Alabama is showing the increaseof wealth at a steadily advancing rate, which characterizes the South generally, the increase in Louisville between 1905 and 1906 being from $396,821,157 to $459,271,270, or by $82,450,113, as against an increase of $45,800,000 between 1904 and 1905; in Tennessee an increase of $25,000,000 between 1905 and 1906, being greater by $8,000,000 than between 1904 and 1905 and in increase of $80,000,000 in Texas between 1905 and 1906 being $23,000,000 greater than the increase between 1904 and 1905. It is further estimated that since 1902 property values in Mississippi have increased by $90,000,000.

The total increase of land values in the 14 States was something more than $432,000,000 between 1904 and 1905. The increases this year in the five States mentioned suggest that the increase this year for the South will be close to $450,000,000, which will bring the total up to about $7,100,000,000 assessed property value."

Southern prosperity is reflected in the millions of dollars being spent upon industrial enterprises in railroad construction and in municipal and private improvements. Notable among these are several just completed, under way or planned for Charlotte, N. C., a city of about 40,000 population, the expenditures representing investments of more than $1,000,000. The city has just completed water works enlargement at a ocst of $400,000, railroad improvements planned will cost $200,000, a $250,000 hotel will be ready for occupancy by the first of next year, a $60,000 hospital will be built so that its present planned capacity may be enlarged, a building for a medical college will cost $20,000 and one for the Y. M. C. A. will cost about $70,000. At the coming election there will be a vote on the proposition of issuing $200,000 worth of bonds for thecompletion of the model roads for which Mecklenberg is famous.

Other evidences of activity in the South developed during the past week are the plans for an expenditure of $1,000,000 in the utilization of waterpowers on the Catawba river near Hickory, N. C., for electrical purposes, 12,500 horse power being expected; the perfecting of the water works system at Charleston, W. Va., at a cost of $150,000; the development of 300,000 acres of coal and iron land in East Tennessee and the purchase by Minnesota capitalists at a cost of $10,000,000 of the controlling interest in more than 300,000 acres of coal land in Kentucky.

Realization upon the cement possibilities of the South is progressing. Much interest is manifested in the beginning this week of operations at a big cement plant near Leeds, Ala., as another plant of the kind is under contract in the same section where them aterial for the manufacture of cement abounds and still another is contemplated. At South Pittsburg, Tenn., $1,000,000 will be spent in building and equipping a plant for the manufacture of 25,000 barrels of cement daily. The buildings will be mainly of steel and the equipment will include engines for 4,000 horse power.

TED'S GHOST PARTY

By CHARLES FREEMAN

Copyright, 1906, by E. C. Parcells

John Ellison slowly descended from the carriage and turned toward the house. He walked slowly and with the bearing of a man utterly dejected. Nettie, watching him from the veranda, dropped her work and ran toward him.

"Was it any better today?" she asked anxiously. Her father shook his head.

"The day force went out when they came to work," he said. "The night force stopped work about 2 o'clock this morning."

"Don't you think that Ted could help?" she pleaded. "He knows the men so well."

"I told Raymond that I would not have him about the works again," said the old man bitterly. "Have you broken your pledge?"

"I have not seen him since that night," she declared, "but I do think he could do you so much good, father."

Ellison pushed her aside with gentle roughness and passed on up the walk. Nettie looked after him for a moment, then, with a sigh, followed the bowed figure into the house.

When the big contract had come, there had been much jubilation. It was not alone that the completion of the contract meant a large sum of money; it was the work that the successful termination of this job would bring.

Then Ted Raymond, head draftsman in the pattern room, had asked for Nettie's hand and had been refused her father's consent. He had been dismissed, and since then everything had seemed to go wrong.

There had been a strike of the workmen, and when the strikers had been replaced with new men the newcomers had refused to remain in the plant, declaring it to be haunted.

The engineer employed to replace the striker had disappeared after the first night's work, and it was declared that he had been thrown into the furnace.

Night after night his phantom form could be seen hovering in the smoke and steam from the stack and exhaust pipes, and no man dared remain, the fear of the night shift communicating itself to the day force.

Raymond always had a good influence over the men, and Nettie felt certain that he would be able to adjust matters, but she had given her pledge not even to speak to him, and she could not urge him to take up the work.

It was late that night and Nettie was combing her hair when there came a gentle tap on the door, and she opened it to admit her father. She was shocked at the change that had come over him in the few hours since dinner. His face was seamed with furrows and his form stooped with care.

"I have been thinking over what you said," he began without preface as she assisted him to a chair. "I do not want to break my word, but absolute ruin stares me in the face. If Raymond can stop this fear of the supernatural in the men I will take back what I said and accept him as my son-in-law. Will you send him to me in the morning?"

"Are things as bad as that?" she asked. Ellison nodded.

"Unless I can obtain a permanent force by the end of the week," he said, "it will be impossible to complete this contract in time."

"And this is only Tuesday," she mused. "Ted can do it."

Ellison went away comforted. Apart from what he termed his presumption, he liked the man with his clean cut incisive manner and quick comprehension. Somehow he felt that herein lay his solution.

The next day there was consternation in the strikers' camp. The pickets reported that Ted had been made superintendent of the works. They liked him, but also they feared him.

That night gave Ted his first view of the specter. He remained with the night shift, and shortly after midnight there was a cry of alarm in the yard, and he rushed out to find the men all staring at the huge smokestack.

There in the swirling wreaths of smoke floated the dead engineer's image. Once or twice the specter vanished, only to reappear again, and for twenty minutes the men stared. Then, as if moved by a single impulse, they went to their lockers, and an hour later Ted and the old watchman were left alone in the yard.

The day shift went to work, as usual, but it was not long before the men grew uneasy. There were no apparitions in the daytime, but they felt nervous at the thought that the spirit of the murdered man hovered over the works.

At the noon hour they talked it over, and when the whistle blew for the return to work they went to the office in a body. They found Ted busy with some bits of glass covered with red paint. He looked up as the spokesman entered.

"Better make it short," he said quietly. "I suppose you do not want to keep on working in a haunted foundry."

"That's right," declared the leader. "We can't stand it."

"Think you can hold out through the afternoon?" he asked. "We are going to give a little ghost party tonight. Keep at it until knock-off time comes, and the two shifts will have supper together."

"Won't that ghost be around tonight?" demanded the leader suspiciously. "It may be all foolishness, but you saw it yourself last night."

"I hope to again this evening," he said. "That is where the fun will come. Like to be a ghost yourself tonight?"

Something in Ted's manner convinced the committee. The members went out into the yard and advised a return to work. All the afternoon there was an evident dislike of going into dark corners alone, and the engineer shivered every time the draft made the furnace roar, but they all stuck to the work and shared in the party at 6 o'clock.

"It will be dark enough by 9 to have the party," declared Ted. "When the whistle blows come into the yard and don't be afraid."

Just before 9 Nettie and her father came whirling up, and a few minutes later the whistle blew its summons. The men trooped into the yard and gathered about in little knots, whispering to themselves. Presently from the stack there arose a dense white smoke, and almost immediately the ghost of the dead engineer appeared. With a cry the men drew together, and a moment later Madison, the spokesman of the morning, came toward Ted.

"The boys want to know if you are going to keep your word," he said roughly. "You said you was going to fix that ghost."

"So I am," said Ted evenly. "I said, too, that I was going to make a ghost of you. Look up."

With a shriek Madison fell to the ground, writhing in terror. There in the smoke wreaths was his own face. Ted's face followed and in turn a dozen of the others. Then the light died away and Ted mounted the steps of the office.

"Boys," he said in a voice that penetrated every part of the yard, "I promised you that I would lay that ghost. I think I have done so. It was a clever stage trick. The strikers are using Jones' hall across the street for their meetings. You can see that the tower is about level with the stack. When fresh coal was put on and the smoke was heavy it acted as a screen for a magic lantern in the tower. That was all there was to it. When they went up to work the lantern tonight I had the police there to catch them, and my own man worked the lantern for this little seance. One of the men they caught was the engineer himself. He is no more dead than I am. Are you satisfied to go back to work? We have a big contract, and I want to know that you boys will stick."

"You bet we will!" came the chorus, and Ted turned to Nettie.

"Let's go over to the house and have our own celebration," he suggested.

Unique invitations written in blood red ink and surmounted by a hand painted figure of a witch sailing through the air on her broom, were received by friends to a Hallowe'en party, which read:

You are summoned to a Hallowe'en gathering of the Witch and Wizard
Order of Necromancers
The revel will be held on the night of
October thirty-first, 1906.
Time, nine by the town clock.
Place, corner Fourth and Ann streets.
An immediate reply is requested,
Signed, A Crowd of Witches.

The entertainment carried out fully the idea of the witches party, the cauldron containing the traditional serpent, frog, eagle's heart, shot on the wing, and the three drops of water simmered as the "witches" in dominoes, marched around the cauldron chanting songs while the fortunes were brewing. Miss Nellie McMillan as the gypsy fortune teller was happy in her equations and the fortunes from the large cornucopia, which was suspended from the ceiling, afforded much amusement. By way of digression it may be said that one of the "goblins" declares that the word "witches" was a misnomer, but he was willing to assert that the young ladies are very witching. The usual Hallowe'en games were indulged in and upon the stroke of the hour of 12 each young lady looked long and hard in the mirror, to catch even a fleeting glimpse of the man she is to marry and then wonder what is the color of his eyes. Very tempting refreshments were served and after an evening of unusual pleasures the guests departed carrying with them memories of delight which will long be cherished. The "witches and wizards of the order of necromancers" and the "goblins" who danced attendance on them, attending the revel at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Green, were: Miss Jane Iredell Green, Jeannie Murchison, Isabel Williams, Alice LeGrand, Marguerite Walker, Sadie F. Williams, Alice Davis, Helen Pleasants, Ella Jacobs, Mary Jones, Margaret Horsfield, Blanche Morton, Charlotte Pleasants, Nellie MacMillan,, Florrie Grant, Bessie Lower and Messrs. Haughton James, J. Marion James, Ed Holmes, Dr. John W. Stanley, Speirs Hicks, Benjamin Bell, Jr., Louis Moore, Louis Hatch, Waddell Watters, John Q. Myers, James Lynch, Herbert Lynch, Richard L. Mears, James Gause, John C. Slocumb, Alban Pleasants, Dave Sloan, Dobert Cantwell, Rob. James, Edmund Crow,, Markley Crosswell, and Ed Bailey.

HAIR TELLS CHARACTER.

Color of Hair Said to Indicate a Person's Temperament.

Many people believe that blonde, or light hair denotes affection and dark hair constancy. A person without hair is not devoid of character; far from it. The disposition of the average baldheaded man is to show such solicitude for the welfare of others, that he neglects himself. A germ causes baldness. Prof. Sabouraud, of Paris, France, inoculated a rabbit with Dandruff germs, causing it to become totally bald in five weeks' time. To rid the scalp of these dangerous germs it is necessary to apply Newbro's Herpicide.

"Destroy the cause—you remove the effect."

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit. Mich.

There's no use getting mad if that for sale sign you stuck on the front of your vacant house has not brought you a tenant or purchaser. Your sign has been read and reread by practically the same people, who pass by it every day and who are too intent on other things to stop and look over the property. Now, if you would advertise in the Business Locals of the Morning Star it would come before the eyes of all the people looking for real estate. This is because they are accustomed to have the Morning Star tell them what property in Wilmington may be had.

GOLDEN NUGGETS FOR SALLOW PEOPLE

A Year of Blood.

The year 1903 will long be remembered in the home of F. N. Tacket, of Alliance, Ky., as a year of blood; which flowed so copiously from Mr. Tacket's lungs that death seemed very near. He writes: "Severe bleeding from the lungs and a frightful cough had brought me at death's door, when I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, with the astounding result that after taking four bottles I was completely restored and as time has proven permanently cured." THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, Nov. 3.—The cotton market opened barely steady at a decline of 3 to 7 points and sold off to a net decline of 8 to 10 points with March touching 10 cents as a result of stop orders and lower cables. There was considerable covering at the decline and prices rallied 4 to 5 points during the middle of the morning owing to uneasiness over the heavy rain storm reported at Key West and reports of firmer Southern spot markets. There seemed to be little buying for long account, however, and the tone of the market was not better than steady. The market closed steady.

Receipts cotton at the ports today were 58,831 bales against 71,054 last week and 48,603 last year. For the week 460,000 bales against 478,161 last week and 364,458 last year. Today's receipts at New Orleans 15,002 against 17,997 last year and at Houston 10,733 bales against 15,238 last year.

A Freak of Nature.

The most wonderful piece of natural sculpture in the world may be seen by any visitor to the Cape Verde islands. This specimen of natural art work is without doubt the most colossal and marvelous freak known to the geologists and geographers. San Vincente is the principal town of the islands. As the ship enters the harbor of the above named place one sees a bold ridge of dark volcanic rocks lying in the distance. The crest of this ridge forms an exact likeness of Washington, the figure lying apparently face upward, as if in sleep. The large, bold features, the backward wave of the hair, the rotund form of the massive shoulders and even the frills on his colonial shirt are reproduced on a scale of such magnitude and grandeur as to be absolutely startling. The fidelity of the outline is such that the freakish forms assumed by the stalactites and stalagmites in the well known natural caverns are not suitable comparisons. This strange natural monument to the greatest of American heroes is the first object to meet the gaze of the observing sightseer as he approaches the Cape Verde islands. With the boundless ocean for its background and the tropical sky overhanging it, it is no flight of the imagination when we say that the freak forms a tableau of overpowering magnificence.

A Brain In Your Throat.

Did you know that the throat has a brain of its own? I suppose few people are aware of it, but it's a fact. There is a small ganglion which exercises direct control of the muscles of the throat and acts as its brain. Of course it is subservient to the genuine brain, but at the same times does a good deal of independent thinking for itself. It is very timid and suspicious of any strange objects that come near the throat. For this reason it is very difficult for a physician to operate on the throat. Before anything can be done in this direction it is necessary for the operator to gain the confidence of the little brain that dominates it. It frequently takes weeks before this confidence can be secured, and until it is secured it is impossible to perform any operation. Woe to the man who attempts rough treatment to the throat before gaining the little brain's confidence! His operations will be resented with violent paroxysms, first of the throat, then of the diaphragm, and if the operator still persists the patient will be thrown into convulsions. Still more curious is the fact that this little brain has a memory, and if once frightened in this way it is almost impossible to ever gain its confidence, no matter how gentle the operator may be.—Pearson's Weekly.

Ants Live on Lice.

In their migrations from plant to plant the lice are often aided by their foster mothers, the ants, for many species are carefully cared for and guarded by the ever diligent ants. A peculiar sweetish liquid called "honeydew" is secreted by the aphides of which the ants are extremely fond. To secure this they herd the aphides, much as if they were little green cattle. Frequently an ant may be seen tapping an aphis with her antennae, upon which a drop of the honeydew is exuded and quickly lapped. Thus the ants are probably entirely responsible for carrying the young aphides which affect the strawberry roots in Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey and elsewhere from the foliage down to the roots and for carrying them from plant to plant as the plants wither from their injury. The melon louse is similarly carried by the ants from hill to hill. But most remarkable of all is the case of the corn root aphis, which lays its eggs in ants' nests in the fall, where they are carefully guarded all winter, and in the spring the young aphides are carried by the ants to the roots of their favorite food plants.—E. D. Sanderson in Garden Magazine.

The Retort Genial.

A southern woman who is now past her prime, but whose ready wit still makes her a welcome guest wherever she goes, tells the following story about an encounter with what she terms a "northern iceberg." She was at a musical entertainment at a private house in New York, and at the end of a song which had been delightfully rendered she turned with an exclamation of pleasure to a lady who sat near and whom she knew by sight, but had never met.

The woman addressed looked at her in surprise for a moment and then asked coldly, "Have I the pleasure of knowing you?"

"No," was the answer, "but I felt at liberty to speak to you on account of your being under such very great obligations to me."

"Will you have the goodness to explain what you mean?" said the New York woman haughtily.

"Merely that I refused your husband twenty-five years ago," replied the little southerner as she moved away to seek a more congenial atmosphere.

The Great Lantern Fly.

One of the largest and most curious of the many luminous or lamp bearing insects is the great lantern fly, a species of the firefly peculiar to central and northern South America. The great lantern is hardly as large as the common dragon fly or "snake feeder," but like that creature it has lacelike wings and an elongated abdomen. In Central America, particularly in Costa Rica and Panama, the Indians capture them by thousands, using them as decorations for their headdresses, saddles, etc. The Frenchman Renard who visited Gautemala in 1802 declared that the Indians used lantern flies and other luminous insects much in the same manner that we do torches and lanterns and that by the light the insects give out they were able to find their way through dark woods and swamps.

WAS CAMPAIGN OF VITUPERATION

Close of Most Extraordinary Political Contest in History of New York.

HAS BEEN PERSONAL DUEL

Hearst and Hughes Have Hurled Charge and Counter Charge and State Has Been Wonderfully Stirred—Both Confident.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

New York, Nov. 3.—To-day practically closed the most extraordinary campaign for governor of New York in the political history of the State, although both candidates will continue speech-making until Monday night. It has been a campaign of personalities rather than policies, of men instead of measures, and it has stirred the interest of the voters of the Empire State to its extreme boundaries. For vigor and viturperation it has been without precendent among State campaigns and for persistency of appeals for votes by the two candidates it stands alone. National issues aside from the so-called "trusts" have been entirely ignored and State issues have scarcely received passing mention. Sensational charges have been injected from time to time, and interest has been kept at the highest pitch for several weeks. The official close of the campaign to-night was amidst a blaze of political enthusiasm and rapid fire oratory.

The close of the campaign finds a political situation unprecedented in this State and some of the shrewdest politicians who have been watching the trend of affairs admit that the usual sources of political prognostication are all but worthless. Party lines have been broken as seldom before. Mr. Hughes has been making a special plea for Democratic support.

Mr. Hearst has attacked the "trusts" and "boss rule" and through his Independence League he is claiming the support of many Republicans. Mr. Hearst has been attacked by his opponents "for having taken the hand of a boss to secure the Democratic nomination," and the alleged "Hearst-Murphy deal," has been the subject of numerous Republican speeches. Mr. Hughes has charged that "money was lavishly used to secure control of the Democratic convention at Buffalo."

Mr. Hearst has attacked Mr. Hughes on the alleged ground that he is "a corporation lawyer," and has declared that "the trusts " are the friends of the Republican candidate.

Mr. Hughes has charged Mr. Hearst with "political insincerity" and asserts that his opponent is "selfishly ambitious in seeking office."

The campaign throughout has been a personal duel rather than a party battle. Mr. Hearst claims the practically undivided support of union labor and the Independence League, and asserts that he has so broken down the Republican machine up-State as to make impossible the huge Republican majority which has heretofore been brought down to the Bronx to wipe out the Democratic plurality in Greater New York.

Mr. Hughes and the Republican campaign managers are ready to admit that there has been desertions from the Republican ranks among the laboring classes, but assert that this loss is more than offset by the promised support of the old line Democrats.

Leader Murphy, of the Tammany his attacks upon the Tammany organization during the mayoralty campaign of a year ago, will carry Greater New York by plurality of from 80,000 to 100,000 votes. The Republicans claim Mr. Hughes will come to the Bronx with 260,000 votes to spare.

Probably the most sensational features of the campaign were the messages of Richard Croker, former leader of Tammany, and now a resident of Ireland, and the remarkable attack of Secretary of State Root upon Mr. Hearst in his speech at Utica on November 1.

Secretary of State Root with the authority of Presient Roosevelt, as he announced, made a most remarkable attack upon Mr. Hearst in his Utica speech, charging him with inciting through his newspapers the assassi- authority of President Roosevelt, as he nouncing him in no uncertain terms.

In Brooklyn, Kings county, an anomalous situation has presented itself. State Senator McCarren, Democratic leader in that borough and in absolute control of the machine, has consistently opposed Mr. Hearst. At a recent political meeting Senator McCarren denounced Mr. Hearst and then moved the endorsement of the State Democratic ticket which was carried with a rush. Subsequently the meeting endorsed McCarren's stand in opposing Mr. Hearst. Kings county nominally is Democratic by a large majority.

In Manhattan, as in other boroughs of the city of Greater New York, Richard Croker's views on Mr. Heart's candidacy caused a mild sensation, particularly among the Tammany followers. Charles F. Murphy, Tammany leader, has reiterated his declaration that Tammany would do everything it could to elect Mr. Hearst. He did not believe, he said, that Mr. Croker's opinion would turn any considerable number of Tammany votes away from Mr. Hearst, and as to the district leaders, he said they "would not dare to work against him."

Hearst Pouring Hot Shot.

After a day of rest broken only by a trip to Yonkers where he spoke briefly, William R. Hearst to-night made a lively tour of Manhattan where seven monster mass meetings had been arranged in his interests.

"We have made a good fight and we will win a great victory. The victory will be great in the number of our plurality, for I believe that we will win by over 200,000. He said:

"Bt the victory will be greater in another way. It will be a great victory for the people against the power of corrupt corporations. It will be a great victory for the Democracy of Thomas Jefferson and the Republicanism of Abraham Lincoln. It will be more than a victory in political principles. It will be a victory of essential morality in public life, for truth in public statement and for honesty in public service.

"Hundreds of thousands of dollars and perhaps millions of dollars will be thrown into this State and city on election day by corrupt corporations to debauch the ballot and corrupt officials. Certainly these great trusts that make millions and hundreds of millions by governmental favors and through the failure of public officials to enforce the law, will spend part of those millions to preserve their especial privileges.

Money to Beat Hearst.

Max Ihmsen, political manager for William R. Hearst, came out in a statement to-night in which hesays:

"I am absolutely confident that Mr. Hearst will win this election by 200,000 majority. The desperation of the Republicans is manifest in the course they have pursued. Federal interference has been invoked and vituperation and abuse has taken the place of argument, but if vituperation and abuse fail, as they surely must, the Republicans have another Reliance. That reliance is money.

"Never before in the history of the State in a State election has so much money been available to the Republican managers as is at the disposal for this campaign. The aggregate will probably equal that which was used in the presidential campaign of 1896. Information has come to me that in Albany county alone $75,000 will be spent on election day by the Republicans and in Clinton $40,000. This information is from several sources I cannot doubt. What is being done in these counties is typical of what is being done all over the State."

NARROW ESCAPE IN THE ARTIC

Commander Peary Encountered Unusual Difficulties in Search for North Pole

LOST PART OF HIS SUPPLIES

Steamer Roosevelt Was Badly Damaged by Ice and Storms and Ran ...Short of Coal—Expedition Now in Labrador.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Lenox, Mass., Nov. 3.—That Commander Peary encountered unusual difficulties in his search for the North Pole, was indicated in a telegram received today by Morris K. Jesup, president of the Peary Arctic Club. The text of the telegram received follows:

"Hopedale, Labrador, by way of Twillingale, N. F.

"Steamer Roosevelt now here. Repairing rudder and stern, taking ballast and awaiting arrival mail steamer to secure coal. Return voyage incessant struggle with ice to Cape York, September 26. Then storms and headwinds to Labrador coast October 23; carried away two rudders, stern post and two blades of propeller, foretop mast and spanker boom; lost one boat; burned all coal and sofe interior beams, using wood and blubber along coast. Expect to communicate again from Chapeau bay. All progress will be slow. Have no anxiety for our safety and give no credence to exaggerated reports. Roosevelt is returning this year for additional supplies and for repairs. Several tons of whale meat and dog food thrown away last Fall after poisoning number of my dogs. Other supplies lost by breaking of ice in April.

(Signed) "PEARY."

Peary is Well.

New York, Nov. 3.—Mrs. Robert E. Peary, wife of the explorer, received today the following message from Commander Peary, dated at Hopedale, Labrador:

"Homeward voyage incessant battle with ice, storms and headwinds. Propellor damaged and passage very slow. Waiting here for coal from mail steamer. Have no anxiety. Expect wire from Chateau bay. Am perfectly well."

TUESDAY'S BATTLE OVER NEXT HOUSE

Democratic Campaign Managers Claim that Party Will Have 22 Majority.

REPUBLICAN CLAIMS HIGHER

Chairman Woodruff Thinks Trust Party Will Have 58 Majority—North Carolina Expects to be Democratic by 40,000 to 50,000.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Washington, Nov. 3.—With but two days intervening between the time when the country will elect the Sixtieth Congress, there is decidedly a general area of "high pressure" in the political atmosphere.

The Republican claim, emanating from the headquarters of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee in New York is this:

"The Republicans will have a majority of 58 in the next House of Representatives."

The analysis of this claim from the same source is:

"Sure Republican districts 222; sure Democratic districts 130; doubtful but probably Republican 21; doubtful but probably Democratic 13."

The Democratic Congressional campaign committee with headquarters in Washinngton, has figured out 67 Democratic gains over its present representation in the House. Chairman James M. Griggs, of this committee, thinks this claim is rather too conservative. In analyzing the claim to show where the gains are expected Mr. Griggs is quoted as saying:

"The claim of a Democratic gain of 10 in New York is safe. claim of one gain in Massachusetts, North Carolina, Kentucky, Montana, Delaware, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Idaho and Virginia is good. The claim of a gain of six in Pennsylvania is too conservative. The same may be said of the claim of a ain of six in Illinois. We will gain eight in Missour. Concessions are made to us of five or six in Ohio, but we will do better than that. The computation that puts us down for only one in Indiana is in error. New Jersey is to be counted on for a gain of three, while gains will be made in Iowa, Nebraska and California."

Should the Democratic prediction of 67 be realized that party would have a mapority of 22 in the Sixtieth Congress.

North Carolina Democratic.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 3.—Indications in North Carolina are for a Democratic majority of 40,000 to 50,000, dependent upon the vote polled. Democratic leaders profess absolute confidence in carrying every Congressional district and it seems well founded, though the Republicans are claiming the ighth district by a small majority. The Legislature will be overwhelmingly Democratic.

ROOSEVELT GOING TO VOTE.

Will Leave His Virginia Lodge This Morning for Washington.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 3.—Undaunted by his previous failures, President Roosevelt again went after wild turkey at Pine Knot this morning. The start was made before daybreak and a gang of the wary birds was found, but as hard luck would have it, the dogs flushed the gang before the hunters could get in shooting distance, and all of the game escaped without the President's getting a shot. Satisfaction had to be taken out on Bob Whites and rabbits, quite a number of which were bagged. In the afternoon the President and Dr. Rixey took a long horse back ride and made another foray into the partridge field.

In the afternoon also Mr. Roosevelt accompanied by Mr. Joseph Wilmer, of "Plain Dealing," went for a horseback ride and took a look at the "Plain Dealing" thoroughbreds.

Tonight, the Roosevelt household is resting before a blazing log fire in the Pine Knot hallway, the proposed 'possum hunt having been given up. To morrow morning Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt and Surgeon Rixey will attend service at Christ Episcopal church, about a mile from the hunting lodge. In the afternoon the return to Washington will be begun, the President's private car being attached to the fast mail train which leaves North Garden at 6 o'clock. This should put Mr. Roosevelt in Washington in time to get a good night's rest before going to Oyster Bay Monday to vote.

UTE INDIANS SURRENDER.

Two Chiefs Will Go to Washington to See Roosevelt.

Sheridan, Wyo., November 3.—A conference etween the Indians and troops today resulted in an agreement on the part of the Utes to return with Colonel Rogers to Fort Mead, S. D., to be taken care of by the government. While Chiefs Red Cap and Blackwhiskers go to Washington to talk the matter over with President Roosevelt.

The Utes will go overland with troops of the sixth cavalry. The Indians have not been disarmed and will not be as long as they take no threatening actions.

FOOTBALL.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 3.—Georgetown University defeated North Carolina here to-day 4 to 0 in a game without a touchdown. After four minutes of play in the first half Capt. Bocock, of Georgetown, dropped a beautiful field goal, but it was not allowed on account of too many men being in the line. Two minutes later Bocock did the same trick from the 30 yard line. There was no further scoring. The remainder of the game was fiercely contested up and down midfield except on two occasions when Carolina pushed the ball to Georgetown's 10-yard line and lost it on downs.

GEORGIAN ARRESTED.

Changed Order For One to 201 Bales of Cotton.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

New York, Nov. 3.—Samuel Mandel, a cotton buyer of Sparta, Ga., was arrested here to-day on a charge of forgery. The arrest was made on a request from Sheriff Berry of Hancock county, Sparta, Ga., requesting the arrest of Mandle on a charge of forgery. The prisoner is a well dressed man, short, and with a distinct German accent. He says that he was born in Germany, but lives now in Sparta, Ga. He is 24 years old. It is charged that Mandle altered an order for one bale of cotton to read 201 bales, then to have sold that number for $9,600.

An attachment of $9,550 against the property of Mandle in favor of Shearson, Hammil & Co., cotton brokers of this city, with offices at Savannah, Ga., was made to-day. The action grew out of the sale on October 29 of a bill of lading issued by the Central Railway Company of Georgia for 201 bales of cotton. Shearson, Hammill & Co., allege that the bill of lading was fraudulently altered from "one" to 201 bales of cotton. The attachment was granted on the ground that Mandle was a non-resident. A copy of the attachment was served on a third party.

OLD SOLDIERS MAY VOTE.

Tennessee Supreme Court Makes Strong Ruling.

By Wire to the Morning Star.

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 3.—The Tennessee Supreme Court to-day held that the inmates of the National Soldier's Home at Johnson City, Tenn., have a right to vote next Tuesday, unless their votes are challenged at the polls. The court declared permanent inmates of the Home are not citizens of the State of Tennessee, but those inmates who have homes outside of the government reservation are citizens of the State. Many inmates are from other States. The court ruled that a mandamus proceeding, seeking to inhibit the old soldiers from voting, was not the proper remedy and consequently the petition was dismissed. The litigation was precipitated by the animated Congressional race in the first Tennessee district.

.. BRYAN TALKS ON DREAMS. ..

Hits Back at Senator Beveridge For Criticising Him.

Lincoln, Nov. 3.—Speaking at the auditorium to-night to a crowd that filled the hall to the doors, William J. Bryan concluded the political campaign in Lincoln. His subpect was "dreams," being an answer to Republican orators which have spoken in Nebraska this fall, especially in reply to Senator Albert J. Beveridge, of Indiana, who in Lincoln several weeks ago said Mr. Bryan was a splendid man, but in politics was an impracticable dreamer.

Mr. Bryan said Thomas Jefferson had been called an impracticable dreamer and that in Jefferson's day they had a Beveridge in the person of Alexander Hamilton, one of whose pet ideas was that Presidents should be elected for life.
